Storm Rips Across Florida Into Gulf; Marshall Asks U. N. for Curb on Veto

Government Move Viewed as Another Effort to Curb Runaway Market

Starts in November

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A drastic cut in grain exports beginning in November was announced by the Government yesterday.

Allocations for November were set at 29,514,000 bushels, compared with 71,500,000 bushels shipped in June; 74,500,000 in July; 67,471,000 in August, and allocations of 44,036,000 for September and 45,685,000 for October.

Shortly later a blistering attack blaming the Government's grain buying program for the present wild, bull market in grain was delivered by J. O. McClintock, president of the largest grain exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade.

Government Request Criticised

McClintock's blast came on the eve of action today by his directors on a Government request to double margin requirements for grain transactions. The Government sought the board's assistance in halting the price movement that in two months has sent corn more than 60 cents a bushel above all previous records.

"It is neither the privilege nor the responsibility of the board to undertake to influence prices by an arbitrary action such as raising or lowering margins," McClintock said.

Next Monday the Cabinet Food Committee will report on food supplies and exports to President Truman. It will recommend a reduction in grain exports this year to about 475 million bushels, reliable reports said yesterday, compared with 555 million last year.

Substitution Suggested

In place of grain, it was reported, the committee will suggest larger allocations of Cuban sugar, fats and oils, and both canned and dried fruits. The committee is made up of Secretaries Marshall (State), Harriman (Commerce) and Anderson (Agriculture).

Although the November announcement said this cut merely

Man at Telephone Puts Finger on Bet Headquarters

The moving finger of a man dialing a phone pointed the way toward a numbers and race bet headquarters, police said yesterday. They arrested two men charged with operating a lottery, possession of numbers slips and setting up a gaming table.

The men, Julian Edward Pope, 51, of 1348 A st. se., and Jack Bernard Edelstein, 55, of 1312 M st. nw., were released in $3500 bond for Municipal Court appearance today.

Pope was arrested at a drug store at 7th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. Police said they had been shadowing him for several weeks. Watching his finger as he dialed a number in a phone booth, police jotted down the number and traced it to Edelstein's apartment.

They arrested the latter 45 minutes later. According to police, Pope is a former Capitol policeman.

Truman Orders Forrestal Sworn In as Defense Chief

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Aboard the USS Missouri, Sept. 17.—President Truman today ordered James Forrestal sworn in immediately as Secretary of Defense in view of the international situation.

Until this decision by Mr. Truman was made aboard the Missouri as it approached the end of a long vacation cruise from Rio, it had been planned to swear in Forrestal after Mr. Truman's return. The Chief Executive gave no details as to the reason for the sudden decision for the swearing in now.

It was learned, however, that he wants the defense organization to become a going concern instead of being in a state of frozen animation pending a delayed swearing-in.

The decision was made after wireless communication between Mr. Truman and Clark Clifford, the President's legal counsel, who is in Washington.

The matter was taken up yesterday afternoon at a conference between Mr. Truman and his advisers, who include John Steelman, Stanley Woodward of the State Department, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, and Admiral James H. Foskett, his naval aide.

Mr. Truman himself explained the swearing in was expedited because of the international situation. He made the personal disclosure in answer to a news agency query from Washington with the proviso it be given all newsmen aboard.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, said this afternoon Mr. Truman did not have anything particular in mind "except the whole general international situation."

He added that there was no reason to delay the swearing in "since Forrestal was already with his organization."

Despite this explanation by Ross, the action is puzzling, since the swearing in had been postponed many weeks after the naming of Forrestal to the newly created post putting the Army, Navy and Air

Meatless Day Plan Receives Cool Reaction

Restaurant, Hotel, Merchant Groups Are Unenthusiastic

The District Commissioners' proposal that Washington residents observe two meatless days a week yesterday drew fire from the Restaurant Association, the Hotel Association and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The restaurant group, however, promised to work with the city heads in their effort to cut meat consumption as a means of increasing food shipments to Europe.

A five-man special committee has been named by the Restaurant Association to study the problem and inform the Commissioners of results. The committee, it was learned, may recommend a return to wartime menu planning as a way of cutting meat consumption.

The Hotel Association of Washington declined comment on the possible effect the proposal might have on hotel food trade and has planned no action. "It's up to individual hotels," a spokesman said.

Restaurants Opposed

Robert J. Wilson, Restaurant Association secretary, declared the group is "definitely opposed" to the Commissioners' proclamation. "It didn't work during the war," he said, "and it won't work now."

Commissioner Guy Mason regarded the Restaurant Association's investigation with favor. "If our action was a means of getting their study started, then it has served a good purpose," he stated.

Raymond Briggs, chairman of the wholesale meat division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, predicted local observance of the Commissioners' meatless day proposal would be ineffective.

"It would have to be on a Nation-wide basis," he declared, "to be at all effective."

Russian Puts Off Answer To Marshall

U. S. Proposals Cause Cancellation of Talk Now Expected Today

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, Sept. 17.—Andrie Vishinsky, chief of the Soviet delegation, hurriedly canceled a scheduled speech before the United Nations General Assembly today after receiving an advance text of Secretary of State George C. Marshall's talk.

It appeared likely he would give the Soviet answer for tomorrow afternoon after consulting Moscow. Andrei Gromyko, who has used the Soviet veto 20 times as representative to the Security Council, told reporters this country's attitude "could be nothing but negative." Other delegates, usually very free with comment, were unusually tigh-lipped. Almost all said they would have to consult their governments before offering their reactions.

Only H. V. Evatt, Australia's minister of external affairs and chief of its U. N. delegation, was forthright in upholding Marshall's proposal to curb the use of the veto.

"Mr. Marshall's expression of opinion," said Evatt, "is a frank and convincing indorsement of the veto proposals of Australia at San Francisco, supported as they were by so many of the medium and smaller powers, but finally rejected because of the joint opposition of the major powers.

"Two years' experience of the Security Council has therefore vindicated this attitude at San Francisco of the smaller powers and borne out the predictions there made. On this basis of fact, the Assembly should be able to move forward to seek solutions and apply facts."

Delegation heads from two Latin-American countries, adamant against permitting themselves to be identified, declared themselves happy at recognition of the role of small countries in solving the

Stassen Requests President To Call Session on Europe Aid

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Harold E. Stassen, only avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, yesterday gave "all-out support" to the Marshall Plan and said that President Truman should call a special session of Congress to put it into effect.

He said that in advance of the coming winter there were only two plans for Europe—the Marshall Plan for reconstruction and the Communist plan for disruption and, ultimately, Russian domination of the continent.

Stassen flung a question at President Truman: "What are you waiting for?"

If the answer was, he said, that the Government was not ready with a program of action, then another question should be asked: "Why not?" He asserted that the war ended more than two years ago and that the basic facts of this year's economic situation in Europe were known months ago.

Stassen, 40-year-old former Governor of Minnesota and wartime aide to Admiral William Halsey in the Pacific, was the first outstanding Republican to urge a special session of Congress to deal with the European crisis. He spoke at a luncheon given by the New York Chamber of Commerce in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

He told the business group that President Truman should sponsor at once "a Nation-wide, coordinated voluntary food conservation program in America"—a program designed both to help Europe and to head off higher food prices and the

Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Secretary Marshall called on the 55-nation Assembly today to break some of the past two years' deadlocks between Russia and the West.

The Secretary proposed a four-point program of action so bold and so drastic that it left most delegates too astonished even to comment.

He asked the Assembly, to begin with, to pronounce judgment upon the three northern neighbors of Greece, to order them to "cease and desist" in their support of the Greek guerillas, and to set up a commission to see that the Assembly's wishes are carried out.

He asked, secondly, for an "impartial judgment" from the Assembly on the deadlocked Korean issue, in the hope of speeding Korean independence.

Asks Veto Curb Study

He made the historic offer to surrender the American veto on nonenforcement questions in the Security Council, and asked the Assembly for an immediate study of how to modify the veto without amending the United Nations Charter.

Finally—and this was the most novel and far-reaching of the Secretary's proposals—he asked the Assembly to set up a standing committee of all its 55 members, designed to act as a counterweight to the Security Council during the next 12 months.

The Secretary did not speak of it as a counterweight. He insisted that such a standing committee, a virtually continuous assembly, would not infringe on the Security Council's powers.

But he also expressed the opinion that the "untapped resources" of the United Nations were not being used as long as the Assembly, the assembled con-

Judges Uphold Grand Jury in Gaming Case

Immediate Trial Ordered for 23 In St. Marys County

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—Two associate judges of Maryland's Seventh Judicial Circuit today ruled against a defense motion attacking the validity of a St. Marys County grand jury after their chief judge took the stand to tell how he formed the panel.

With the defense motions denied, 23 defendants were ordered to stand immediate trial on indictments returned by the March grand jury charging them with gambling law violations.

At one point while he was on the stand, Chief Judge William M. Loker of Leonardtown shouted an angry "no!" at a defense attorney who asked if he ever named a member to the grand jury because he knew he would be inclined to return certain indictments.

Truman Asks Rehiring of Careerists

By Jerry Klutz
Post Reporter

The President last night called on Federal agencies to hire qualified career employes who have been laid off in reductions of force. There are about 1900 jobless career people in this city.

The President said those war service and temporary employes who hold jobs that career people are qualified to fill must be fired, unless vacancies can be found for the career workers.

Mr. Truman's views were carried in a letter of congratulations to the National Federation of Federal Employes on its thirtieth anniversary, celebrated last night at a dinner in the Washington hotel. His letter was read by NFFE President Luther C. Steward.

In the letter, the President invited the help of NFFE in bringing about these Federal worker reforms:

1. A modernized salary structure;
2. A promotion system based on merit;
3. Improved handling of employe grievances;
4. Better supervision in Government agencies.

The President emphasized the sharp reduction in Federal workers in the past two years, from 3,770,000 to 2,088,000.

"Never before in the history of this or any other country," he said, "has a single employer, within such a short period of time, been called upon to discharge 1,680,000 persons."

On the whole, the President told the NFFE, the lay-off program had

Peace Talks Are Set In Italy's Farm Strike

Rome, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Leaders of one million striking farm workers, making their first break in the 10-day-old walkout that has blocked the Italian harvest, agreed to meet tonight with employers and government experts in an effort to iron out differences.

The meeting was arranged by Premier Alcide de Gasperi as a counterblow against leftist leaders attempting to topple his government. Observers said it indicated a mutual desire to reach a settlement.

De Gasperi struck back at the leftists after Giuseppe di Vittorio, Communist labor executive, threatened to "intensify" the strike if landowners did not meet the workers' demands.

The strike already has imperiled Italy's rice and sugar beet crops. Milk rations have been cut to 25 per cent of normal in the northern areas.

The leftist-inspired wave of strikes against the government appeared to crack at another point today, when textile workers, part of 2,130,000 textile, tobacco and state employes the Communists have threatened to call out, agreed to arbitrate with industry and Labor Ministry officials. Leaders of the three groups will meet September 22 to study a new contract.

Meanwhile, the two-day strike of 850,000 metalworkers, which has tied up 25 per cent of Italian in-

Tanks Line Up, Then Arbitration Is Agreed

Trieste, Sept. 17 (AP).—Italians and Yugoslavs pointed tanks at each other at one contested point on the new frontier at Gorizia today, but a possible clash was averted when it was agreed to refer the matter to a joint Italo-Yugoslav commission.

A spokesman for the United Nations Boundary Commission declared Yugoslavs had asked for changes in their favor of from 20 to 300 yards at every outpost except one on the boundary between the free territory of Trieste and Yugoslavia guarded by British-American troops.

Yesterday an American outpost succeeded in preventing Yugoslav troops from crossing the northern border of the free state and marching into Trieste itself. Today the Yugoslavs were moving south, skirting the British-American occupation zone to reach their own sector in the free territory.

At Udine, Maj. Gen. Giulio Ernesto Cappa, commander of Italian forces in northeastern Italy, called for revision of the Italian peace treaty to increase his country's armed strength as Allied withdrawals left his men facing the Yugoslavs alone along the new provisional boundary. He said the Yugoslav forces were "greatly superior" in number to his own. The treaty limited the Italian army to 185,000 men.

Tanks were brought up at Gori-

Looting Follows In Miami, 1 Shot; Citrus, Vegetable Crops Hard Hit

Miami, Fla., Sept. 17 (AP).—The heaviest hurricane of a decade roared savagely across southern Florida today, devastating a wide belt of citrus groves and vegetable farms but doing no other major property damage.

Winds up to 120 miles an hour ripped into the rich and densely populated resort area of the East Coast, between Miami and Palm Beach. But although one man was electrocuted at Palm Beach and nine persons were missing, casualties were few.

One man was shot to death in Miami and six others were arrested in what police termed "widespread looting" of storm-battered stores.

Storm Now in Gulf

At 7:30 p. m. (EST)—eight hours after it slammed inland from the Atlantic Ocean—the hurricane howled over Fort Myers, and out into the Gulf of Mexico. State police reports from Wauchula, 80 miles to the north, said 100-mile winds whipped Fort Myers and were continuing at 8:30 p. m.

Two vessels were believed in distress off the Florida Gulf Coast.

The course of the storm, after emerging in the gulf, was uncertain.

Citrus growers in southern Florida estimated their probable loss in millions of dollars, but said it was likely that the greater portion of the $100,000,000 crop would be spared.

Truck Crops Badly Beaten

Tomatoes and other truck crops in the muckiands region around Lake Okeechobee were badly beaten by terrific winds and scythe-like rain. There was optimism, however, when Army engineers announced that the costly dike-system was proving its worth, and would hold despite tremendous pressure and 85-mile winds.

Earlier, more than 10,000 persons evacuated the Okeechobee region by car and by train, seeking higher ground near Sebring. Two refugee trains, their box cars and baggage cars jammed with men, women and children, reached their destination after severe buffeting. Occupants told of mud being whipped from the swamps and driven into their faces by the gale.

Hundreds of thousands sought refuge in hotels and public shelters throughout the storm area.

Two out of three radio towers owned by station WGBE of Miami and located at Fort Lauderdale were sent crashing to the ground, although built to withstand 175-mile winds.

Birds sang at Fort Lauderdale during the deceitful lull marking passage of the hurricane's center—then fled before 119-mile pounding which buried 42 yachts beneath a collapsed storage shed.

There was considerable damage

Run-off Vote Necessary In Greenbelt

Canning Is Only Councilman Elected; New Balloting Tuesday

A special runoff election to fill four seats on the Greenbelt (Md.) Town Council was made necessary yesterday, when official returns from Tuesday's town election qualified only one candidate for the five-man council.

Canning

Elected to the council under a town ruling calling for election of all five councilmen by a plurality vote was Thomas J. Canning, War Department attorney, who polled 789 of a possible 1536 votes—34 votes more than the required margin.

Eight other candidates who came next in line but failed to attain the required plurality automatically qualified for the runoff election, which will be held Tuesday. The four highest will fill the remaining council seats.

Failure of any of the 18 other candidates to qualify for the council left the future status of the town's cooperative stores still undecided, since candidates in the run-off election are evenly split in their views.

The top four candidates had been listed along with Canning, the newly-elected councilman, on a slate of five which opposed introduction of unlimited business in opposition to the present cooperative. The other four were members of a ticket led by Mayor George C. Bauer which had voiced

Judge Sends Woman to Jail To Give Her Place to Sleep

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

A 51-year-old woman was committed to jail by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott yesterday to provide her a place to live until authorities found her a home.

At the same time the judge scored Washington's charitable agencies for not having representatives in court to take care of homeless people who have committed no crime.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Hudlow, who is almost totally deaf, was arrested early yesterday in a streetcar station at Georgia and Alaska aves. nw., by Pvt. W. A. Cchubring of the Sixth Precinct on a charge of vagrancy.

The policeman informed the judge that he had observed the woman sleeping there for almost three weeks; that he did not want to arrest her, but due to approaching cold weather, he thought she would be better off in jail.

Mrs. Hudlow told the policeman that she was a ward of the Board of Public Welfare but that she had not received her $46 a month allotment for some time.

She said that she had been evicted from her former home by a hostile sister-in-law. She is separated from her husband.

Judge Scott recalled that when he was in active law practice in the same court in which he now presides, charity workers were always present to care for such cases.

"They no longer attend court," he pointed out, "I wish they would come back."

The judge continued the case until Monday and appointed Attorney Andrew Thomas to investigate the case later admitting he himself was "at a loss" over what action to take.

300-Mile Flight Costs Less Than 4c On Asia Air Line

Tihwa, China, Sept. 16 (Delayed).—What may easily be the world's cheapest airline is now operating over the deserts of Central Asia.

Run by an organization called the Sino-Soviet company, it flies between Alma Ata, in the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, and Hami, in the Chinese province of Sinkiang. To ride on it from Tihwa, Sinkiang's capital, to Hami, a distance of about 300 miles, costs a passenger 1750 Chinese dollars—or slightly less than four American cents at the present black-market exchange rate.

The line, established in 1939, was the central link in a system connecting the capitals of both countries. The two end links—from Chungking to Hami and from Alma Ata to Moscow—were run separately by the Chinese and Soviet governments. Russia supplied virtually all the equipment and personnel, and as a result was given overwhelming majority control.

Radio Hams Relay Storm Story Here

Thousand Short Wave Operators Pass Along Hurricane Messages

Washington radio air last ngiht gushed with the tumult of hurricane, the rush of wind as it swirled across peninsular Florida, cries of alarm before and during the big blow.

Amateur radio operators, sending out feeble messages from storm-beset Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Delray, Palm Beach and West Palm Beach marked messages relayed to the ears of more than 1000 "hams" in Greater Washington.

As the storm center struck each population area the tone of the messages changed from eyewitness chit-chat ot terse emergency broadcasts. These came out of the resort belt on emergency power hook-ups, by battery or gasoline generator, to the waiting ears of other amateur operators in Jacksonville, Daytona, and other cities north of the hurricane's path. They, in turn, passed the messages along to all part sof the United States.

In Ringside D. C. Seat

Occupying a ringside radio seat here is Maj. Burke Edwards of 302 Lynn dr., Chevy Chase, Md. He said he found last night's air clogged with queries of relatives seeking news of their Florida Kin. Asked if "hams" are bothered by such requests, he replied:

"Bothered? No. We're glad to be of any help."

Last night Major Ewards, who during the war operated the net control station for the Army amateur operator's radio system, was intercepting "strictly business" messages from Miami, Palm Beach, and Eustis, Fla. inland city in the storms' path.

"They told of miles of telephone poles blown down, of sections isolated by high tides and breaking seas, of the need for medical supplies here, or serums there, and asked advice on evacuations of people in danger," Major Edwards said.

The veteran "ham" explained how the Federal Communications Commission had ordered the best radio wavelength band set aside in a 1000-mile radius of the storm are afor emergency calls only.

"Most of the hams operating there now seem to be working for either the Red Cross or for the communications' companies," Maj. Edwards said last night.

Major Edwards started his contact with the storm area Tuesday night when the tempest was still 160 miles east of the Florida coast. He then talked with a brother "ham," Tony Litschauer of West Palm Beach, who told him wind-driven rains, propelled by gusts upto 50 miles an hour, were giving the area residents a sample of what was coming.

In Washington last night, the communications section of the American Red Cross said two anonymous "hams" in this area were handling emergency service for the organization.

Red Cross on the Job

"We don't identify them," stated a spokesman. If we did, they would be plagued by the public trying to get word to or from relatives in Florida. The Red Cross is prepared to give this service through its local chapter here."

He suggested that persons seeking information from Florida call RE. 8300, extension 760, and RE. 5275, extension 125, and the information would be serviced through Red Cross channels.

Major Edwards said he intercepted one call informing him that the Red Cross was setting up a "tent city" at Sebring, northwest of Lake Okeechobee. The inland lake was half-emptied, at huge loss of life, in the last major hurricane there, some 20 years ago, Major Edwards said.

Samuel E. Newman, radio engineer, who operates his own short-wave station W3HN from his home at 5109 3d st. nw., also is typical of the local "hams" who "sat in" on the hurricane. He began contact at noon yesterday and still was exploring the air waves late last night.

At 1:45 p. m., said Newman, an amateur operator in Daytona Beach and another at Jacksonville relayed news from the storm center that water service and electric power were "out" from Miami Beach to West Palm Beach.

By 6 o'clock, he said, the "hams" had passed on messages that the blow had passed Miami and was headed, full force, for Fort Myer, Fla., on the Gulf side of the peninsula.

Flood Crisis Near in Tokyo; Typhoon Toll Set at 4500

By Russell Brines

Tokyo, Sept. 17 (AP).—Flood waters of two typhoon swollen rivers—both carrying bodies of storm victims—pushed within 2 miles of Tokyo's eastern suburbs tonight. A crisis was only a few hours away as dead and missing figures stood at 2949.

[The United Press said the unofficial toll was 4500, with 766 dead and 3842 missing.

[Damage was estimated at more than 20 million dollars.]

Casualties included two GIs drowned—and were mounting. Heavy damage extended through 20 prefectures.

Two levee breaks threatened to send the Tone River's flood waters into the eastern suburbs of Tokyo tomorrow. The suburbs were evacuated today.

Kyodo News Agency's latest casualty figures were 774 dead, 158 injured and 2017 missing.

Kyodo said 173,820 houses were inundated and 500,000 acres of rice and other farm lands were flooded.

Food stocks were reported ample in most areas, although 10,000 persons were reported already on relief.

The town of Kasukabe, 20 miles north of Tokyo, slowly was being inundated. When I reached Kasukabe at 3 a. m. its northern half was under one foot of water and residents were evacuating. The original rains, typhoon-born Monday night, ranged from 4 to 9 inches.

United States Army headquarters reported the flood-drownings of two American soldiers attached to a First Cavalry Division artillery unit. Their names were withheld.

There were no reports of any other Allied or American casualties.

at Delray Beach, and a collapsing house buried its occupants at Deerfield. "Millionaire's Row" at Palm Beach was a tangle of uprooted palms and fallen wires. Damage was described by police as "heavy."

Fashionable stores at Miami Beach, improperly protected for the summer, were badly beaten by the storm and suffered water damage. Hotels were isolated when causeways to the mainland were closed and when power and water failed.

Three Missing on Yacht

Three persons were missing on a private yacht, which radioed for help during the height of the East coast blow. However, it appeared possible that they reached safety at Caesar's creek, where the Coast Guard said three persons were aboar da boat. Six others were said to be marooned in a private home at Cape Florida, 23 miles north of Miami.

Red Cross and Salvation Army workers were active throughout the area, and Army personnel stood by for medical service. The Coast Guard planned extensive air reconnaissance tomorrow, and Army rescue planes now in Cuba were ordered to proceed to Nassau.

At the City of Lake Worth, water piled over the seawall, but early reports indicated no property damage.

A delayed report from Bem Price, Associated Press reporter at West Palm Beach, said as the storm approached the streets became a shambles with debris and tile roofs began to peel off buildings. The wind there was 110 miles per hour then, and the peak was yet to come.

Later, Harry E. Stewart of West Palm Beach fire department said "this area is a mess, with fallen trees, broken glass and other debris. We have heard of no major property damage."

Stewart estimated velocity of winds that hit West Palm Beach at 150 miles per hour.

Hurricane winds roared through Miami's deserted streets, and palm trees not already down listed drunkenly at 45-degree angles. Waterfront streets were under about six inches of water.

Deputy Sheriff Charles Carruthers said 207 prisoners in the Dade County (Miami) Jail, perched atop the 19-story courthouse, were rocked by hurricane winds.

More than 1600 persons crowded the clubhouse at Hialeah race track, which was established as a refugee center. Children slept peacefully under the $6 combination window.

Expectant Mothers Aided

One expectant mother was rushed to the hospital from the race track, and Jackson Memorial Hospital announced it was taking all mothers with six months pregnancy or more. They were placed in corridor cots on two floors.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Gerrard of Miami missed death by seconds when a C-47 airplane was blown through the air over three other planes and crashed by the airport terminal building. Gerrard had just moved his car.

Twenty commercial aircraft were crushed at Miami airport when 120-mile gusts ripped the field. All were in Latin-American service.

Relief Stations Set Up

The Red Cross and the Salvation Army set up emergency relief stations throughout the storm area. The Red Cross reported 4000 refugees housed in 41 shelters in the Fort Lauderdale area, and 15,000 in 70 shelters in Palm Beach County.

At Sebring, Fla., authorities opened school houses and all public buildings, as well as recently inactive Hendricks Field, for the refugees. But there were no cots and few brought blankets. Most of them, including many babies, prepared to sleep on the bare floors.

Most of the residents of the Okeechobee lowlands heeded exhortations of the Red Cross, which raced through the area with blaring sound trucks and an estimated 10,000 streamed through Sebring in search of safety.

A few, however, refused to leave their farms, preferring to remain and face a storm similar to the one which drowned 1500 persons in the same area 19 years ago.

In Washington the Maritime Commission announced it had sent a truckload of medical supplies and blankets from Norfolk, Va., to the Florida hurricane zone at Miami.

The supplies, worth about $25,000, include stretchers, splints, medicines, and about 400 blankets. The truck is due in Miami late tomorrow.

Budget Advisers And Gov. Tuck At Williamsburg

Richmond, Va., Sept. 17 (AP).—Governor Tuck and his budget advisers visited Williamsburg in their continuing budget tour today and after inspecting Eastern State Hospital and the College of William and Mary will go to Fredericksburg for a stop at Mary Washington College.

The budget makers had their first surprise of the tour yesterday when the Southampton Prison Farm asked $17,820 less for maintenance and operation for the new biennium than for the current period. This decrease, it was explained, was made possible by the farm's own food production.

The prison officials asked for reappropriation of funds for capital outlays made by the previous general assemblies and an additional $74,000 for electrical work which will be necessary after new buildings are erected.

D. C. Restaurants May Ban Butter, Serve Margerine

The current high price of butter may soon cause "all Washington restaurants" to cease serving it and substitute margarine, an informed source declared last night.

"A good many District cafes," the source said, "are already serving margarine almost exclusively, and many more soon will be."

The source, who asked to remain anonymous, said restaurant owners' representatives had been considering the move "for some time." "We've got to do something," he declared. "We can't just continue to absorb prices."

French Cancel Ban On Large Automobiles

Paris, Sept. 17.—The French government was reported today to have canceled its decision to bar all large private automobiles from the roads. The measure was announced by Premier Paul Ramadier last week as part of his austerity program, which includes cutting gasoline consumption 40 per cent to save dollars.

Ramadier had warned that any private vehicle as large as a Ford would be barred. French automobile manufacturers, including representatives of the Delage, Delahaye, Talbot and Hotchkiss factories, protested today that the government ban would put them out of business and cause repercussions in France's internal economy.

Wind Fells Fla. Radio Tower

By Dick West

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 17 (AP).—(By phone to New York).—I'm dictating this from a dark phone booth in the Good Samaritan Hospital, with the hurricane blowing outside at about 125 miles an hour, and the waters of Lake Worth washing up toward us.

I can't be sure how hard the wind is blowing, because the power is off, and the Weather Bureau instruments are dead, but the 178-foot radio tower of Station WJNO snapped a few minutes ago, and it was guaranteed to stand a 125-mile-an-hour wind.

Waters from Lake Worth were washing up to the door of the station when the seven of us in there decided after about 30 minutes of argument to make a run for it. The radio tower's fall resolved the question, and we started for this hospital, two blocks away.

Palm trees broke right and left as we went by—and we went mighty fast.

Some of the palm trees fell on the street, but fortunately the radio tower, which was across the street, cracked in the middle, and the falling section didn't touch us in the station.

This hospital—a 133-bed institution with about 100 patients—is full of storm refugees. There are no lights, and the refrigeration is out. I'm striking matches to read my notes as I dictate.

The hospital has plenty of supplies, but the fresh meat and milk are spoiling. Canned goods are ample to take care of the patients, hospital authorities said.

There's no way to get food into this city, and many of the refugees don't have much to eat despite Red Cross orders that everyone going to shelter should carry food enough for 24 hours. One family of six had only a sandwich, and that was eaten as I talked to the group.

French Newspaper Protests Visa Delay

Paris, Sept. 17.—Marcel Cachin, 78-year-old editor of the Communist organ L'Humanite, cabled a protest today to Trygve Lie, United Nations secretary-general, over the failure of the newspaper's correspondent, Pierre Courtade, to receive a United States visa in time to cover the opening of the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

Courtade, foreign political editor of L'Humanite, said he had applied for the visa September 3, and that he has queried the American Embassy in Paris "without success" since. He said he had been received by American consular officials with "complete cordiality."

New Yorkers Snub Choice Meat Cuts

Action by Housewives Forces Dealers To Cancel Orders; Politicians Squabble

Post Reporter

High prices kept the Nation's political pot boiling yesterday, but in New York the hard pressed consumer began to hit back by letting the choicest cuts of meat go begging.

In New Hampshire, Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, called upon President Truman to summon leaders of every phase of American enterprise for voluntary action to reduce prices.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) promptly countered with the charge that Bridges was trying "to pass the buck" for high prices from the Republicans to the Democratic administration.

In Boston, Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), House minority whip, followed up by blaming the GOP for "sabotaging" price controls.

Most hopeful aspect to the whole price picture yesterday was the effect of developing shopper resistance in New York.

Retail sales of meat fell off sharply, and dealers began to be sparing in their purchases in the wholesale markets.

As a direct result, slaughtering operations began to diminish, and worried dealers began to think about prices.

The New York development was in line with advice given by both Democratic and Republican leaders throughout the country, who have advised cutting down on purchases until prices are forced down.

Throughout the Nation, the Associated Press reported yesterday, consumer groups are being organized to resist high prices. A new group was formed in Phoenix, Ariz., under the title "Housewives for Lower Prices." Spokesmen said higher priced meats would be boycotted and Congress would be showered with appeals for action.

In a speech at Franconia, N. H., before the New English conference of the Federation of Women's Clubs, Bridges called for Administration action.

"The temper of the people is becoming such that the alternative to voluntary action on the part of leaders of all phases of our economy will probably be a demand for some sort of Government control," Bridges declared.

"Only by open and frank discussion around the conference table by leaders of Government, labor, industry, agriculture, business and finance can the people adequately approach the problems of relieving or even reversing today's cost of living," the New Hampshire Republican said.

He blamed the price situation on the "irresponsible, impractical way," the national administration had handled production and price problems during and immediately after the war.

Bridges also blamed the Government for making available advance information on plans to purchase huge quantities of grain, thus giving speculators an opportunity to buy grain stocks before the Government could purchase them.

He bitterly attacked speculators and their "un-American profiteering," and said:

"I cannot condemn too strongly those who would squeeze the American people for their money at a time when we are trying to share our feed with millions of starving people abroad."

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), chairman of a special Senate Agricultural subcommittee, also slashed at speculation.

Aiken, who said bluntly he could see no real drop in the cost of living until next year's crops are marketed, proposed curbs on the use of grain, such as a curb on distillers, and industry and area rationing.

The Vermont farmer warned that if conditions got any worse, Congress may have to institute compulsory allocation controls unless large grain dealers and trade groups voluntarily allocate production by areas.

Aiken said food prices "would collapse" if the United States halted its exports to hungry nations, but he made it clear he did not favor such action.

Meanwhile the Agriculture Commissioners of five States—Texas, Georgia, North Dakota, Minnesota and Virginia—angrily charged that "inflated" labor costs are the things which have pushed up prices.

In Boston, a subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report announced that inventories of large-scale food producers would be sought to determine if there were any hoarding of food stocks.

Chairman Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) said investigators would be put on the job at once. The committee has received many complaints about speculation on its touring inquiry in New England.

New Defense Secretary Takes Oath . . .

U. S. to Cut Grain Exports represented a long-planned tapering-off from the huge earlier shipments, in market-wise circles it was taken as another Government effort to knock the props from under the runaway grain market.

This feeling was strengthened by the unusual action of withholding the announcement until 3 p. m. —after the close of the Nation's grain exchanges, a policy followed with the monthly crop estimates.

It followed two other actions taken recently by the Department of Agriculture to curb the rampaging speculation in grains:

1. Announcement that the Government already has enough wheat to meet all export allocations until November.

2. The call for doubled margins for grain speculation.

The department also announced the allocation of 16,876,000 pounds of meat and meat products for export during last quarter of this year. This is the same as for the July, August and September quarter.

None of this meat will go to Europe. All will go to the western hemisphere, except four million pounds allocated for the Philippines, and a small amount to be sent to a United States Government project in Liberia.

The November allocations for wheat reflect the British austerity program forced by the dollar shortage. For the first month no grain is allocated to Britain. A previous allocation of 71,500 long tons in October also will not be shipped.

Agriculture officials said the British had asked that these allocations be reserved for possible use later.

Largest shipments of grain planned for November will go to occupied areas. The British and American zones in Germany will get 160,500 long tons; Japan and the Ryukus 25,500 and Korea 17,000. The British occupied area in the Pacific will get 10,000 and French-occupied Germany 8500.

(A "long-ton" is 2240 pounds—or approximately 37½ bushels of wheat.)

Other shipments scheduled are France, 134,000 tons; Italy, 115,000; India, 63,000; the Netherlands, Greece and Belgium, 34,000 each; Austria, 28,000; Mexico, 25,000; Cuba, 16,000; Brazil, 15,000; Egypt, 12,000; Trieste, 8500; the Philippines, 5000, and miscellaneous, 34,800.

The shipments will include 562 tons of wheat, 200 tons of flour and 25½ tons of grain sorghums.

All shipments are paid for by the recipients, except those for former enemy countries, which are being paid for by the American and British taxpayers.

Meatless Day Idea Opposed

mittee, Wilson said, will try to work out an alternate conservation plan. Besides menu planning, he mentioned that the committee is considering asking local restaurants to serve only low-priced meats.

Wilson asserted that the Commissioners' proposal would work a hardship on "those places serving meat specialties." He added that even if it were possible to get 100 per cent cooperation "it would only raise the price of foods which are not in great demand."

Backing Wilson was John W. Ebersole, president of the National Restaurant Association. Ebersole, here from White Plains, N. Y., to discuss food prices with the Washington directors, left yesterday afternoon on a 30-day price-studying tour of the United States.

He proposed that restaurants and housewives serve less expensive meats and foods as a direct method of combating rising food costs.

The Restaurant Association committee is composed of Watson B. Rulon, association president, and Hubert H. Keller, Edward Warner, A. H. Dressell, and Wilson.

The Commissioners' meatless day proclamation followed on the heels of a similar proposal by New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer for that city. The Commissioners have indicated that they plan no further moves beyond urging citizens and local restaurants to observe their proclamation.

Truman Orders Forrestal Sworn In as Defense Chief

Force under a single administrator.

Mr. Truman announced selection of Forrestal for the post on July 26, when he signed the unification bill.

It is apparent that something has happened to convince the President of the need for a Defense Secretary to be able to act with full legal authority speedily if necessary.

Main trouble spots right now are Greece and Trieste. In both those places Dictator Tito's Yugoslavia poses a threat to the democracies. Ross was asked if Yugoslavia had anything to do with the swearing-in decision. He replied he did not think it figured particularly.

[The United Press said that while the President's staff was reticent about defining the "international situation" which prompted the speed-up, it was disclosed that Mr. Truman was following closely the tense situation at Trieste.

[In addition to confidential dispatches from Washington, it said, the President read of the extremely delicate border incidents in the Missouri's ship newspaper. It carried as its lead story last night a United Press dispatch quoting a Congressman just back from Europe who described the Trieste situation as a "power keg." —Editor's note.]

The Forrestal matter emphasizes that Mr. Truman's vacation is truly nearing its close. He has been at sea since September 7. Tomorrow is the last full day at sea. By tomorrow at 8 a. m., the Missouri will be 400 miles east of Wilmington, N. C.

Today the ship, traveling at a slow 15 knots, passed West Bermuda. It will arrive at Norfolk Friday and the President will sail to Washington aboard his yacht, the Williamsburg, arriving at the Naval Gun factory at 8 a. m., Saturday.

Today was another bright blue day with a calm sea. During part of the morning, the President witnessed the third straight day of gunnery practice. He sat in a fire-control post aft of the superstructure and watched the flight of a radio-controlled robot plane.

Gunners fired 197 rounds from 5-inchers, while the robot was at distances of up to 6000 yards and a height of 6000 feet. There were lots of close bursts, but the drone stayed up 49 minutes, made 13 passes and landed out of gas. A destroyer picked it up.

Forrestal's Induction A Surprise

America's streamlined new military organization got under way yesterday in a surprise ceremony at the Navy Department.

James V. Forrestal was sworn in as the Nation's first Secretary of Defense, and immediately the wheels started turning to put the long-planned unification plan into effect.

Immediately after the ceremony, Forrestal called the first meeting of top civilian and military chiefs of the "National Military Establishment"—as the unified setup is officially known.

"Purpose of the meeting," stated Forrestal's first press release as Defense Secretary, "was to discuss some of the immediate problems facing the newly formed organization."

The Chief Justice of the United States, Fred Vinson, administered the oath of office, as the first Secretary of Defense stood in front of a portrait of the first Secretary of the Navy, Benjamin Stoddard, a member of President John Adams' Cabinet.

The defense reorganization under the Unification Act formally went into effect at midnight last night. Today at noon W. Stuart Symington will be sworn in as Air Force Secretary, heading the new Department of Air Force.

At the same time, Undersecretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan will take the oath as Secretary of the Navy, succeeding Forrestal. Both ceremonies will take place in Secretary of War Kenneth Royall's office in the Pentagon.

Royall relinquishes the title of Secretary of War today and becomes a Secretary of the Army. He does not take another oath, however. The War Department becomes the Department of the Army.

Details of the separation of the Air Force from the Army will be announced by Royall at a press conference called for this afternoon.

Formal launching of the new defense setup had been planned for next week. After an exchange of messages between Forrestal and President Truman, however, it was decided to act immediately. Aboard the USS Missouri, the President said he had advanced the date because of the international situation.

Forrestal declared the ceremony was advanced because all preliminary arrangements had been completed and it was desired to get the new organization going as soon as possible.

Present at yesterday's high command meeting were the three service secretaries, Royall, Sullivan and Symington, the three top military chiefs; General Eisenhower, Admiral Nimitz and General Spaatz; Arthur M. Hill, chairman of the new National Security Resources Board; Sidney W. Souers, executive Secretary of the new National Security Council; Thomas J. Hargrave, chairman of the Munitions Board; Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, director of central intelligence, and Clark Clifford, President Truman's advisor.

Forrestal yesterday appointed four top aides to assist him in his new job.

They are:

Wilfred E. McNeil, 1802 Irving st. nw., to the key post of special assistant for fiscal, budget and administrative matters. A major function of the new Defense Secretary is passing on the Army, Navy and Air Force budgets.

McNeil, now administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, was a rear admiral during the war, and previously was a Washington Post circulation executive.

Marx Leva, 3065 Porter st. nw., to be special assistant for legal and legislative matters. Leva, 32, was law clerk to Justice Hugo Black, and a WPB attorney before serving with the Navy amphibious forces during the war.

Capt. Robert W. Berry, USN, to be Forrestal's assistant for public relations. Berry commanded an assault transport and a cruiser during the war. He was also deputy director of Navy public relations from 1941 to 1943.

Capt. Charles Allen Buchanan, USN, to be naval aide to the Secretary of Defense. Buchanan, like Leva and Berry, has been on Forrestal's personal staff in the Navy Department.

Stassen Asks Special Session

danger of "boom and bust in the American economy."

Stassen, who recently had a lengthy talk with Generalissimo Joseph Stalin, said that it was inevitable that the competition and clash between the American and Russian philosophies would continue.

"But it is not inevitable that it will lead to war," he said. "In fact, if we remain strong in a military sense so that we do not tempt others to seek a decision by force, there is an excellent likelihood that this basic struggle will be resolved on the economic, social and ideological fronts and will never be an issue in the grim and tragic holocaust of a third world war."

Urges Tax Reduction

Stassen, after criticizing the European trend toward socialization, emphasized the need of keeping the American economy strong and free. In this connection, he said that "We must taper off from our excessively high war-time tax levels."

"We should give all-out support to the Marshall Plan for the rebuilding of Europe," he said. "It is not a perfect plan . . . But we need to realistically face alternatives. As Europe moves into this next bleak winter, there are only two plans—one is the Marshall Plan and the other is the Communist plan . . ."

He said that speed was urgent in implementing the Marshall Plan, and continued:

"As these weeks and months slip by, knowing that the cold blasts of winter will soon sweep out of the North Sea, that hunger and cold and death wait for no man, it is time we ask the President of the United States, 'what are you waiting for?'

Facts Should Be Known

"If the answer is that our Government is not ready with a program of action we should ask, 'Why not?' It is over two years since the end of the war. The basic facts of this year's economic situation in Europe were known months ago. This is not a surprise situation . . .

"The American people are overwhelmingly in support of meeting the problem. They seem to me more keenly aware than our leaders of the requirements of the world-wide competition in which we are engaged . . .

"The shortage of food around the world for this next winter requires immediate action. We should begin at once a Nation-wide, coordinated, voluntary food conservation program in America . . . This is important both for Europe and for us. Unless we do this the pressure of demand on a dwindling food supply next winter will drive our high prices even higher and increase the danger of boom and bust in American economy."

Would Lay Down Conditions

Stassen said that the United States should make it clear that it would assist the nations of Europe with food regardless of their economic and social plans.

But when it comes to rebuilding their plants and helping them to step up production, he said, the United States ought to lay down a condition—that they agree to move "in a direction of economic freedom" and not "down the road of socialism or communism."

Stassen said he was aware that there are critics of this approach on the ground that it involves dictation to European nations and interference in their internal affairs. But he argued:

"The regimentation of an economy and the socialization of industries restricts the capability of the workers of a country, deprives them of tools and of effective management and holds them down just as effectively as if their hands were tied behind their backs . . . Why then should we not place economic conditions on the program of our aid toward rebuilding?

Senator Thye Predicts Stassen Nomination

By The Associated Press

Senator Thye (R., Minn.) predicted yesterday that Harold E. Stassen will receive the Republican presidential nomination next year.

"The people counting Stassen out of the race just do not understand the man's ability and therefore are unable to understand what he has accomplished," Thye told a reporter.

Md. Students Learn to Park At $3 a Lesson

University of Maryland students are learning, at the rate of $3 a lesson, that university officials weren't kidding when they said "drastic steps" would be taken to clear up the school's parking situation.

Beset by parking problems resulting from a heavy increase in enrollment, an influx of registration-week visitors and campus streets blocking by building projects, the university has engaged a garage to tow away automobiles found improperly parked.

University officials said between 30 and 40 students became victims of the new towing "service" when it was begun yesterday after previous warnings.

The students not only were required to travel about a mile to the garage, but had to pay a $3 towing charge.

Col. George Weber, business manager of the university, said the tow truck was engaged as a last resort after numerous appeals and warnings failed to bring results. He said th eparking problem was emphasized yesterday when an ambulance, which called at the school to mak ea routine hospital transfer, could not reach a dormitory because of traffic congestion and the patient had to be carried about a block on a stretcher.

Board Named to Study Express Wage Dispute

The members of the emergency board to investigate a wage dispute between the Railway Express Agency and the AFL Teamsters Union were announced by the White House yesterday.

They are: Leverett Edwards, Oklahoma City lawyer; former Judge H. Nathan Swaim of the Indiana Supreme Court, and Norman J. Ware, West Hartford (Conn.) economist and labor arbitrator.

Gorizia Clash Is Averted

zia when a Yugoslav colonel demanded that the boundary be changed to include three houses presently in Italy. The Italian carabinieri moved up six tanks when the colonel made his demand, and the Yugoslavs countered by drawing up three. This dispute went to the commission.

At another Gorizia outpost, Yugoslavs set up six machineguns but removed them an hour later.

Demonstrations added to the tension in Gorizia. About 1000 Slovenes on the Yugoslav side of the line marched to an outpost shouting "Fascists" and "Gorizia is ours." Both Yugoslav and Italian civilians demonstrated last night at the Gorizia railroad station, which is in Yugoslav territory. The Yugoslavs yelled "Fascists" and the Italians countered with "Titoites."

Signs Respected

Another instances of a Yugoslav demand for a change in the border along the free state occurred at outpost No. 8 on the main road from Ljubljana to Trieste. The American commander refused the request and the Yugoslavs did not insist.

In Trieste, a large funeral procession wound through the streets carrying the bodies of two Italians killed in riots on Monday that marked the passage of the city from Italian rule. One was a 17-year-old student.

In general, Yugoslav troops were respecting the "no admission" sign put up on the northern borders of the free state by the British-American military government.

Headquarters denied the American detachment at Dueno Castle border outpost had fired a warning machinegun burst to keep the Yugoslavs from crossing into the British-American zone, as announced yesterday.

(Britain protested "vigorously" to Yugoslavia against the latter's action in trying to move troops into Trieste.)

U. S. Scraping European Aid

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States is scraping the bottom of the barrel for funds to forestall an economic crisis in Europe, Robert A. Lovett, Acting Secretary of State, said yesterday.

Lovett stated many departments of Government were exhausting every resource to find dollars for countries urgently in need of food, coal and other supplies, pending action on findings of the Marshall Plan conference in Paris.

He listed France and Italy as those most urgently in need of help, with Britain next in line.

The acting Secretary told a news conference these funds were being sought from every likely source. Among such sources he named pay due Italy for work of Italian prisoners of war and gold seized by Germany and later captured by the Allies. This gold, estimated at more than a quarter of a billion dollars, is being allocated by the gold commission of the Interallied Reparations Agency at Brussels.

Postwar aid already given France and Italy, in addition to UNRRA supplies, has been considerable, it was explained. In September, 1946, the United States turned over to France 20 billion dollars of military equipment, and last June the World Bank made a 250-million-dollar loan to that country.

Last month the United States allocated a number of Liberty ships to Italy, wrote off a 540-million-dollar debt for food furnished to Italain civilians and unfroze 45 million of Italian assets.

This country already has paid Italy 255 million dollars for services, facilities and supplies purchased by American armed forces during the war.

Aid to Britain was concentrated chiefly in a 3¾-billion-dollar loan made last year.

Lovett described the task of finding stopgap funds as terrific and said it was occupying much of the time of the State Department. He reiterated a previous statemetn of Secretary of State Marshall that aid must be given these counries before the end of the year, and added that the urgency increases with the passage of time.

Asked wheher it was considered useless to send aid to Italy while Italian farm and factory workers were on strike, he said the State Department had opinions on the matter, but he would not care to state them. He did rebuke Palmiro Togliatti, Italian Communist leader, for his recent statement that the United States was a "world dictatorship" seeking to incite another war and dominate Italy. There was no truth in such charges, Lovett said.

Aid Underdeveloped Nations, Egypt Asks World Bank

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—Egypt warned the International Bank and International Monetary Fund today not to risk longer delay in providing aid for under-developed countries of the world.

"The need for development in the Middle East and other underdeveloped countries is urgent," Ahmed Zaki Bey said, Egyptian representative, told the final session of the second annual meeting of the board of governors.

"It is vital to raise the standard of living of the masses in these areas," he declared.

Zaki Bey's warning brought from Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Hugh Dalton, retiring chairman of the fund and bank's board of governors, a statement that:

"It is not unreasonable that primary emphasis should be placed on assistance to those countries damaged by the war."

At their final meeting the governors elected O. K. Yui, of China, chairman for the ensuing year. The third annual meeting of the Bank and the Fund will be held in Washington next September.

The Fund, which yesterday approved Britain's application for 60 million dollars in exchange for sterling, announced that it will make a special study of the position of silver in the world's monetary organization. Mexico proposed the study.

The Fund said it would "urgently request" its members to submit all pertiment data on silver and its uses not later than March 1, 1948.

Attending the sessions as head of the U. S. delegation was Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder. Visitors today included Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington (D. C.) Post and former president of the Bank.

Baby Born to Wife Of Ex-Governor Earle

Philadelphia, Sept. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Jacqueline Sacre Earle, second wife of George H. Earle, former Governor of Pennsylvania, became the mother today of a seven-pound, 10-ounce girl at Bryn Mawr Hospital.

The 57-year-old husband, who has four sons by his first marriage, was at the hospital and marched up and down the waiting room like any bridgegroom awaiting his first child. Earle and the former Sacre of Ostend, Belgium, were married in Ankara, Turkey, in 1945.

Russians Dismantle Rails in Germany

Berlin, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Russians have dismantled for reparations more than 4375 miles of railroad trackage in eastern Germany, according to the annual report of the German central ministry for transport quoted today by the French-licensed newspaper Kurier.

The report said only three of the main railroad lines in the Russian zone of Germany remained double tracked.

Text of Secretary Marshall's Speech to U. N. Proposing 'Interim Assembly' and Curb on Veto Power

Flushing, N. Y., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Text of Secretary of State George C. Marshall's address today before the General Assembly of the United Nations:

MR. PRESIDENT, fellow delegates:

I have been asked by the President of the United States to extend to you the cordial greetings of the Government and people of the United States, as well as his own warm personal welcome. We are happy to have you with us in this country. We trust that your stay will be productive of the far-reaching results which the peoples of all countries expect from this gathering.

Our point of departure for the deliberations of this Assembly might well be the annual report of the secretary-general on the work of the organization. It is a noteworthy document. It records realistically the progress and development of the United Nations, and its failures. It reflects the diligent efforts of the secretary-general and his staff to expedite the rapidly growing volume of United Nations business.

The situation we face today may be summarized by the statement that more than two years after the end of the war, the fruits of peace and victory are still beyond our grasp. Men look anxiously toward the future, wondering whether a new and more terrible conflict will engulf them. We have not yet succeeded in establishing a basis for peace with Germany and Japan, nor have we restored Austria as an independent state. Reconstruction lags everywhere; the basic requirements of life are scarce; there is desperate need throughout great areas. The complex economic machinery which was thrown out of joint by the war has not yet been put back into running order. In place of peace, liberty and economic security, we find menace, repression and dire want.

A SUPREME effort is required from us all if we are to succeed in breaking through the vicious circles of deepening political and economic crisis. That is why the United States has placed on the agenda of this Assembly the question of threats to the political independence and territorial integrity of Greece.

The history of the Greek case in the United Nations is well known in this Assembly. You are aware that the Security Council, last December adopted a resolution establishing an investigating commission to inquire into the situation along the northern frontier of Greece and report the facts to the Security Council. You know that that commission and its subsidiary group, by large majorities, have attributed the disturbances principally to the illegal assistance and support furnished by Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria to guerilla forces fighting against the Greek government. The extent or effectiveness of such assistance to the Greek guerillas is not the point at issue here. It is a universally accepted principle of international law that for one nation to arm or otherwise assist rebellious forces against another government is a hostile and aggressive act. Not only has this principle been upheld in a number of famous cases in international law, but it has also found expression in international agreements. The majority of the members of the Security Council have recorded this support of this principle by their action in this case. One permanent member of the Security Council, however, has three times vetoed the efforts of the Council to deal with the situation.

This Assembly cannot stand by as a mere spectator while a member of the United Nations is endangered by attacks from abroad. If the United Nations should fail to protect the integrity of one small state, the security of all states would be placed in jeopardy. The inability of the Security Council to take effective action in this case passes a grave responsibility to the General Assembly. I am confident that the General Assembly will not fail to meet this responsibility. It must do so if the organization is to carry out its fundamental purposes.

The United States delegation will therefore submit to the Assembly a resolution which will contain a finding of responsibility; call upon Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia to cease and desist from rendering further assistance or support to the guerillas in Greece; establish a commission to assist in the implementation of these recommendations and to investigate the facts with regard to compliance therewith and make other appropriate recommendations to the states concerned.

THE General Assembly is also faced with the problem of Palestine. The Government of the United States intends to do everything within its power at this session of the General Assembly to assist in finding a solution for this difficult problem which has stirred up such violent passions, and which is now resulting in the shedding of blood and in great mental and moral anguish. The solution will require of each of us courage and resolution. It will also require restraint.

The Special Committe on Palestine is to be highly commended for its contribution to the solution of this problem. Although the members of this committee were not able to agree unanimously upon a number of important issues, including that of partition, they have been able to find the basis for agreement on eleven recommendations to this Assembly. Their achievement in reaching unanimity on so many points represents definite progress.

We realize that, whatever the solution recommended by the General Assembly it cannot be ideally satisfactory to either of the two great peoples primarily concerned. While the final decision of this Assembly must properly await the detailed consideration of the report, the Government of the United States gives great weight not only to the recommendations which have met with the unanimous approval of the special committee but also to those which have been approved by the majority of that committee.

I turn now to the question of the independence of Korea. At Cairo, in December 1943, the United States, the United Kingdom, and China joined in declaring that, in due course, Korea should become free and independent. This multilateral pledge was reaffirmed in the Potsdam Declaration of July 1945, and subscribed to by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics when it entered the war against Japan. In Moscow in December of 1945, the Foreign Ministers of the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States concluded an agreement designed to bring about the independence of Korea. This agreement was later adhered to by the government of China. It provided for the establishment of a joint United States-USSR commission to meet in Korea and, through consultations with Korean democratic parties and social organizations, to decide on methods for establishing a provisional Korean government. The joint commission was then to consult with that provisional government on methods of giving aid and assistance to Korea; any agreement reached being submitted for approval to the Four Powers adhering to the Moscow agreement.

For about two years the United States Government has been trying to reach agreement with the Soviet government, through the Joint Commission and otherwise, on methods of implementing the Moscow Agreement and thus bringing about the independence of Korea. The United States representatives have insisted that any settlement of the Korean problem must in no way infringe the fundamental democratic right or freedom of opinion. That is still the position of my Government. Today the independence of Korea is no further advanced than it was two years ago. Korea remains divided at the thirty-eighth parallel with Soviet forces in the industrial north and United States forces in the agricultural south. There is little or no exchange of goods or services between the two zones. Korea's economy is thus crippled.

THE Korean people, not former enemies, but a people liberated from 40 years of Japanese oppression, are still not free. This situation must not be allowed to continue indefinitely. In an effort to make progress the United States Government recently made certain proposals designed to achieve the purposes of the Moscow Agreement and requested the powers adhering to that agreement to join in discussion of these proposals. China and the United Kingdom agreed to this procedure. The Soviet government did not. Furthermore, the United States and Soviet delegations to the joint commission have not even been able to agree on a joint report on the status of their deliberations. It appears evident that further attempts to solve the Korean problem by means of bilateral negotiations will only serve to delay the establishment of an independent, united Korea.

It is therefore the intention of the United States Government to present the problem of Korean independence to this session of the General Assembly. Although we shall be prepared to submit suggestions as to how the early attainment of Korean independence might be effected, we believe that this is a matter which now requires the impartial judgment of the other members. We do not wish to have the inability of two powers to reach agreement delay any further the urgent and rightful claims of the Korean people to independence.

For the achievement of international security and the well-being of the peoples of the world, it is necessary that the United Nations press forward on many fronts. Among these the control of atomic and other weapons of mass destruction has perhaps the highest priority if we are to remove the specter of a war of annihilation.

The preponderant majority of the Atomic Energy Commission has made real progress in spelling out in detail the functions and powers of an international control agency which would provide a framework for effective atomic energy control. Two nations, however, have been unwilling to join the majority in the conclusions reached. This is a disturbing and ominous fact. In dealing with the facts presented by the advent of atomic energy, the majority has devised a system of control, which, while it is bold and daring, is, in our view, essential for security against atomic warfare. The minority has evidently been unwilling to face these same facts realistically. The mandate of the General Assembly remains unfulfilled. Failure to agree on a system of control which can provide security against atomic warfare will inevitably retard the development of the peaceful uses of atomic energy for the benefits of the peoples of the world and will accelerate an atomic armamnts race.

THE INITIAL offer made by the United States on June 14, 1946, by which this country would give up its present advantage in exchange for an effective system of control, has found most gratifying acceptance by the majority of the nations represented on the commission. They have worked earnestly together to hammer out specific proposals whereby such a system could be put into effect. All have made important contributions to the end product. The majority is convinced that its proposals provide the only adequate basis for effective control.

Since the United States realizes fully the consequences of failure to attain effective international control, we shall continue our efforts in the Atomic Energy Commission to carry forward our work along the lines of the majority views. We must state frankly, however, that in the absence of unanimous agreement on the essential functions and powers which the majority has concluded must be given to the international agency, there will necessarily be limitations on the extent to which the remaining aspects of the problem can be worked out in detail. If the minority persists in refusing to join with the majority, the Atomic Energy Commission may soon be faced with the conclusion that it is unable to complete the task assigned it under its terms of reference laid down in the General Assembly resolution of January 24, 1946.

The United States also recognizes the importance of regulating conventional armaments. We regret that much more progress has not been made in this field. From this rostrum it is very easy to pay lip service to the sincere aspirations of all peoples for the limitation and reduction of armed forces. This is a serious matter which should not be the subject of demagogic appeals and irresponsible propaganda. I say frankly to the General Assembly that it is the conviction of my government that a workable system for the regulation of armaments cannot be put into operation until conditions of international confidence prevail. We have consistently and repeatedly made it clear that the regulation of armaments presupposes enough international understanding to make possible the settlement of peace terms with Germany and Japan, the implementation of agreements putting military forces and facilities at the disposal of the Security Council, and an international agreement for the control of atomic energy.

Nevertheless, we believe it is important not to delay the formulation of a system of arms regulation for implementation when conditions permit. The Security Council has accepted a logical plan of work for the Commission for Conventional Armaments. We believe that the commission should proceed vigorously to develop a system for the regulation of armaments in the businesslike manner outlined in its plan of work.

THE effective operation of the United Nations Security Council is one of the crucial conditions for the maintenance of international security. The exercise of the veto power in the Security Council has the closest bearing on the success and the vitality of the United Nations.

In the past the United States has been reluctant to encourage proposals for changes in the system of voting in the Security Council. Having accepted the charter provisions on this subject and having joined with other permanent members at San Francisco in a statement of general attitude toward the question of permanent member unanimity, we wished to permit full opportunity for practical testing. We were always fully aware that the successful operation of the rule of unanimity would require the exercise of restraint by the permanent members, and we so expressed ourselves at San Francisco.

It is our hope that, despite our experience to date, such restraint will be practised in the future by the permanent members. The abuse of the right of unanimity has prevented the Security Council from fulfilling its true functions. That has been especially true in cases arising under Chapter VI and in the admission of new members.

The Government of the United States has come to the conclusion that the only practicable method for improving this situation is a liberalization of the voting procedure in the Council.

The United States would be willing to accept, by whatever means may be appropriate, the elimination of the unanimity requirement with respect to matters arising under Chapter VI of the charter, and such matters as applications for membership.

We recognize that this is a matter of significance and complexity for the United Nations. We consider that the problem of how to achieve the objective of liberalization of the Security Council voting procedure deserves careful study. Consequently, we shall propose that this matter be referred to a special committee for study and report to the next session of the Assembly. Measures should be pressed concurrently in the Security Council to bring about improvements within the existing provisions of the charter, through amendments to the rules of procedure, or other feasible means.

THE SCOPE and complexity of the problems on the agenda of this Assembly have given rise to the question whether the General Assembly can adequately discharge its responsibilities in its regular annual sessions. There is a limit to the number of items which can receive thorough consideration during the few weeks in which this body meets. There would seem to be a definite need for constant attention to the work of the Assembly in order to deal with continuing problems, occasional special sesions are not enough. The General Assembly has a definite and continuing responsibility, under Articles 11 and 14 of the charter, in the broad field of political security and the preservation of friendly relations among nations. In our fast-moving world an annual review of developments in this field is not sufficient.

The facilities of the General Assembly must be developed to meet this need. I am therefore proposing, today, that this Assembly proceed at this session to create a standing committee of the General Assembly, which might be known as the Interim Committee on Peace and Security, to serve until the beginning of its third regular session next September. The committee would not, of course, impinge on matters which are the primary responsibility of the Security Council or of special commissions, but, subject to that, it might consider situations and disputes impairing friendly relations brought to its attention by member states or by the Security Council pursuant to Artcile 11 and 14 of the charter and report to the Assembly or to the Security Council thereon; recommend to the members the calling of special sessions of the General Assembly when necessary, and might report at the next regular session on the desirbaility of establishing such a committee on a permanent basis. of the United Nationss should be seated on this body.

The creation of the interim committee will make the facilities of the General Assembly continually available during this next year to all its members. It will strengthen the machinery for peaceful settlement and place the responsibility for such settlement broadly upon all the members of the United Nations. Without infringing on the jurisdiction of the Security Council, it will provide an unsurpassed opportunity for continuing study, after the adjournment of this Assembly of the problems with which the United Nations must contend if it is to succeed.

THE attitude of the United States toward the whole range of problems before the United Nations is founded on a very genulne desire to perfect the organization so as to safeguard the security of States and the well-being of their peoples.

These aims can be accomplished only if the untapped resources of the United Nations are brought to bear with full effect through the General Assembly and in other organs. The Assembly cannot dodge its responsibilities; it must organize itself effectively, not as an agency of intermittent action but on a continuous basis. It is for us, the members of the Assembly, to construct a record of achievement in dealing with crucial problems which will buttress the authority of the organization and enable it to fulfill its promise to all peoples.

The large powers bear special responsibilities because of their strength and resources. While these responsibilities bring with them special advantages, the great powers must recognize that restraint is an essential companion of power and privilege. The United Nations will never endure if there is insistence on privileges to the point of frustration of the collective will. In this spirit we have indicated our own willingness to accept a modification of our special voting rights in the Security Council. In the same spirit we appeal to the other permanent members of the Security Council, in this and all matters to use their privileged position to promote the attainment of the purposes of the organization.

The Government of the United States believes that the surest foundation for permanent peace lies in the extension of the benefits and the restraints of the rule of law to all peoples and to all governments. This is the heart of the charter and of the structure of the United Nations. It is the best hope of mankind.

Not a bit of "starter" is used. No artificial flavor. And no "turned" or soured cream! Yes, Montrose Butter is truly premium in quality—rated at the highest score recognized by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Each cube of Montrose Butter is wrapped in parchment-lined aluminum. No outside food flavor can get in . . . the fine natural flavor of sweet cream cannot get out. The wonderful taste is guarded right up to the moment you consume the last bit of the cube. Try it!

Guarantee: Take home a pound of Montrose Butter from Safeway. Compare it with any other butter at any price. If you do not agree that Montrose is the finest butter you have ever tasted and that the aluminum wrap keeps butter fresh longer—return the carton and your store will refund your full purchase price.

THE FINEST BUTTERWRAP EVER DEVISED PROTECTS EVERY CUBE OF MONTROSE
1. Aluminum wrap (parchment-lined) keeps butter at full "score"—flavor and quality—much longer than ordinary wraps.
2. Prevents absorption of flavors from other foods. Even when stored with onions, garlic, fish, cheese or cantaloupes, Montrose does not absorb any of the taste or odor of these foods.
3. Prevents oxidation of the fat in butter. Oxidation results from exposure to light . . . causes butter to discolor and to take on surface flavors. Ordinary butterwraps cannot prevent oxidation because they are not "lightproof."

Atomic War Seen Fatal for Britain

Scientist Says Nation Must Be Neutral Or Join U. S. in Maintaining Peace

London, Sept. 17 (U.P.)—Britain is doomed to destruction in any atomic war unless she manages to remain neutral, a top British scientist warned today.

The scientist, Prof. N. E. Mott, 42, said the country now has reached the crossroads and soon must decide whether to abandon all preparations for atomic warfare or to join the United States in maintaining a world peace backed by overwhelming atomic power.

Even with American help, Great Britain could not survive an atomic attack launched from the European continent, Mott said in the monthly magazine of the British Atomic Scientists Association. He is president of the association.

The only two nations which might launch such an attack are Russia or a resurgent Germany, Mott said. An Anglo-American alliance would prove a powerful deterrent to war, but not an absolute guarantee of peace, he said.

Marshall Asks Curb on Veto science of the world, met only in annual sessions. He made it clear that he wanted the Assembly, in which no veto applies, to remain in session all year through the device of such as committee, which is called the "Interim Committee on Peace and Security."

Idea Not a New One

Such an idea was not new, although it official sponsorship by the United States was a complete surprise.

It was broached even before the first Assembly meeting, at the London session of the preparatory commission late in 1945. At that time the Netherlands delegate suggested forming a standing committee of the Assembly.

It also had been considered, but rejected, by Dr. Leo Pasvolsky and his State Department colleagues who helped to evolve the Dumbarton Oaks proposals that led to the charter.

Nothing in the charter says the assembly must confine itself to annual sessions, and there is nothing in the document to prevent the assembly from setting up any special or permanent committees it chooses. Certainly the Security Council, with its Soviet veto, cannot prevent the formation of such a committee, since the assembly's subsidiary agencies are the assembly's own business.

The fate of the proposal was uncertain tonight, however, as delegates consulted their governments on what they would say about it. The Russians and their friends are certain to fight it tooth and nail, on the ground that it is an ill-concealed device to circumvent the Security Council, where the veto applies.

The objection will also be raised that it violates the Charter, which gives the Security Council "primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security." Secretary Marshall argued, however, that under Articles 11 and 14 of the Charter, the Assembl has certain powers "to consider situations and disputes impairing friendly relations."

These, he suggested, would be the subject matter of the proposed standing committee, which would have no greater range of power than the Assembly itself. The Assembly cannot make recommendations on any subject being considered at the same time by the Security Council; the proposed committee would be limited in the same way.

But it could discuss any subject brought before it by a member, and it could recommend action just as freely as the Assembly itself. The veto, of course, would not apply, since the Assembly operates by two-thirds or majority vote, depending on the nature of the issue.

As to the veto, the secretary's offer to surrender it in certain cases was by far the most important development in this incessant controversy since the San Francisco Conference. Until now the United States had complained of Soviet "abuse" of the veto, but had never gone further than suggesting changes in the Security Council's rules of procedure.

The proposal today was aimed not at the Charter itself but at the four-power declaration at San Francisco—later joined by France—which specified how the great powers intended to use the veto. This declaration, which Marshall described today as "a statement of general attitude," made it clear that the great powers had to be unanimous on questions of peaceful settlement as well as of enforcement against an aggressor. It even sanctioned the so-called "double veto"—the right of one country to decide, against the wishes of the others, that a question is "substantive," rather than "procedural" and therefore subject to the veto.

What Secretary Marshall did today, therefore, was to call in effect for a replacement of the San Francisco agreement of the big powers. Last year, during the meeting of the foreign ministers in New York, an attempt was made to get a five-power revision of the voting procedure, but it failed because the Russians would have none of it.

McKellar Leaves Hospital world's controversies through a curb on the Big Five veto.

But they were unanimous in stating they feared becoming enmeshed in the animosity between the Russians and United States.

In Washington, Yongjeung Kim, president of the Korean Affairs Institute, said: "There is no justifiable reason for the Korean people to suffer further because of Soviet - American disagreements. The case of Korea now clearly falls to the United Nations for an immediate decision."

'Declaration of War' Against U. N., Reds Say

London, Sept. 17 (INS).—The first Moscow radio comment on Secretary of State Marshall's speech calling for revision of the veto power interpreted it as a "declaration of war against the United Nations."

Even before Marshall spoke the Soviet official news agency Tass charged that United States policy leads to "unconditional subjugation of the U. N. to the White House or outright liquidation of the organization."

American Relief Policies, Marshall Plan, Attacked by Poland in U. N. Assen

By a Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, Sept. 17.—American relief policies and the Marshall Plan were attacked by Poland today in terms which suggested that these economic issues would be aired and debated in coming Assembly sessions.

The Polish attack was delivered by Foreign Minister Zygmunt Modzelewski just after Secretary of State George C. Marshall had finished his speech.

Although Modzelewski expressed gratitude "in particular to the American Nation" for its help to UNRRA, he said European reconstruction could not be built on "he political and economic plans of those who are now in possession of resources, and in a position to impose their own criteria, which, from the economic point of view, cannot be regarded as rational."

He deplored what he called the by-passing of the United Nations in reconstruction schemes, and "any kind of discrimination, be it racial, political, national or social"—an apparent protest against the American decision to exclude Poland and the rest of the Soviet bloc from congressional relief funds.

Twice he used the word "egotistic" to describe American policies, although he did not attack the United States by name. He condemned policies which would build up Germany's economy without correspondingly reviving Allied neighbors, like Poland, which suffered from German aggression.

Although Poland refused, on Soviet orders, to take part in the Marshall Plan conference at Paris, he repeated that Poland was ready to play her part in European reconstruction "by our increasing coal exports, by the development of our industry and agriculture and by our exchange of goods."

He said Poland would maintain and develop her economic relations with other European countries "whether the yile east or west of the Oder or the Elbe."

Early drafts of today's speech by Secretary Marshall contained a discussion of the European economic crisis, but the Secretary decided to delte this material. He wanted to confine his speech today to subjects on which the Assembly was expected to act.

Does Stomach Gas and Bloat Make You Feel Miserable?
If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in freeing your stomach from this nervous distress. It works this way:
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Soviet Loses Move to Bar Greek Airing

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Sept. 17 (INS).—Russia sustained its first stinging defeat on the Greek issue tonight when the U. N. General Assembly's 14-man steering committee overrode a Russian motion to delete the Greek question from the Assembly agenda.

The vote was 12 to 2. Only Poland and Russia voted to bar discussion of the U. S. charge that Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria are supporting guerilla forces on Greece's northern border.

In addition to being outvoted, Russia's Andrei Gromyko got a severe tongue lashing from Assembly President Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil for discussing the "substance" of the Greek dispute in the general committee.

Knows What Happened

Aranha said: "I don't understand Russian, but I understand the French translation well and I do know that the Soviet delegate exceeded the powers of the general committee and talked on the substance of the dispute.

"Now I will have to permit its translation in English."

The committee does not have the power to delete any item from the assembly agenda but can recommend that questions put on the agenda by the various U. N. nations be deleted.

[The steering committee voted unanimously today to set up a special 55-member committee to consider the Palestine problem during the current assembly session, the Associated Press said.]

Proposed by Lie

[The committee was proposed by Secretary-General Trygve Lie.

[Faris El Khoury of Syria, Arab representative on the steering committee, objected initially to creation of the special committee, he failed to press his objection.

["After considering other possible measures," Lie said, "the secretary-general suggests that the general (steering) committee recommend to the plenary meeting the establishment of an ad hoc political committee on which each member of the General Assembly would have the right to be represented and that this committee would consider any items on the agenda concerning Palestine."

[Lie's proposal was intended to lighten the load of the Assembly's political committee which has before it such questions as the Balkan problem and the veto.]

India Charges Troops Loot, Kill in Punjab

New Delhi, Sept. 17 (AP).—A government of India communique today charged Pakistan's Moslem troops with "considerable killing and looting" in communal warfare in West Punjab and a spokesman said steps were being taken by India's military authorities "to prevent possible reprisals."

This first official mention of incidents involving Moslem troops in attacks on Sikhs and Hindus specifically mentioned a Pakistan government estimate that 60 were killed and 70 wounded when the Moslem military escort of one train fired at another trainload of Hindu and Sikh refugees at Sheikhupura four days ago.

It also mentioned a Pakistan report that 100 were killed and 100 wounded when a Moslem mob attacked a Hindu-Sikh caravan near Lyallpur three days ago, and added, "both estimates are considered low."

A military spokesman in referring to the conduct of Moslem troops, said "it has happened before" and added, "our information is that Pakistan is not protecting refugees on the same scale as India."

He said Pakistan troops moving through India to Pakista nalso had been guilty of killing and looting.

Nursing Council Head Gets Medal for Merit

Mrs. Elmira Bears Wickenden, wartime executive secretary of the National Nursing Council, has been awarded the medal for merit by President Truman, the Federal Security Agency announced yesterday.

The medal is presented for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the war efforts." Mrs. Wickenden is the first nurse to be so honored, the agency said.

Import Controls Tightened by Sweden

Stockholm, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Swedish government drastically tightened import controls today, describing the exchange situation as serious. The decree removed from the list of goods which could be imported without license such items as oil products, coal, steel, several rubber products, textiles and various kinds of machinery.

It left on the "free import" list some chemicals, wood products, printed matter and printing plates.

Donnelly Succeeds Corrigan as Envoy

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Frank P. Corrigan, United States Ambassador to Venezuela, who will become political adviser on Latin American affairs to the United States delegation to the United Nations.

The White House said Mr. Truman has appointed Walter J. Donnelly, now Ambassador to Costa Rica, to succeed Corrigan in Venezuela.

Britain May Swap Sterling With Fund for More Dollars

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—Government sources said today it was "pretty certain" Britain would seek more dollars from the International Monetary Fund in exchange for sterling. The board of directors approved an application for 60 million dollars yesterday.

Camille Gutt, managing director of the Fund, told a news conference Britain could purchase a total of 217 million dollars without exceeding her quota. The dollars thus obtained can be used to help tide Britain over her dollar shortage until a Marshall Plan or some other means is worked out, the British said.

A Government spokesman said the possibility that Britain soon would apply for a loan from the World Bank was "receding" as a result of the purchase of dollars through the Monetary Fund. World Bank loans have been made at an interest rate of 3½ per cent. A service charge of only ¾ of 1 per cent is made by the Fund on currency exchange transactions.

The Financial Times said today that Britain's sale of 80 million dollars worth of gold to the United States this week and her subsequent recourse to the Monetary Fund were partly designed for publicity to hel win congressional approval for the Marshall Plan to aid Britain and the rest of Europe.

Meanwhile, it was announced here that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire, accompanied by his Minister for Industry and Commerce, Sean Lemass, would come to London Friday for financial talks, preliminary to slashing its purchases in dollar countries. These in the the first five months of 1947 totaled 30 million dollars from the United States.

New Zealand to Cut Imports From U. S.

Wellington, N. Z., Sept. 17 (AP).—Finance Minister Walter Nash, clarifying New Zealand's policy on imports from Canada and the United States, today said the dollar situation made it necessary for New Zealand to restrict imports from these countries to "absolutely essential goods."

Politicians Predict Cabinet Revamping

London, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Political sources predicted tonight that a large-scale reorganization of the cabinet was imminent to centralize authority needed for direction of the new "export or die" program.

Responsible quarters, however, did not expect any change in the "top five"—Prime Minister Clement Attlee, Lord President of the Council Herbert Morrison, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, President of the Board of Trade Sir Stafford Cripps and Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton.

U. S. and Soviet Trade Charges In Far East

Tokyo, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—American and Russian representatives on the Allied Control Council again hurled charges of obstructionism at each other today.

William J. Seebald, American member, said the Russians were "trying to weave a web of subtle propaganda" and using "double talk."

Russian Maj. Gen. A. P. Kislenko accused Seebald of an "attempt to mislead public opinion."

At the end of the 50-minute session, however, both appealed for cooperation and harmony.

Kislenko started today's exchange of charges, taking up where Seebald left off September 3. He said Seebald had hurled "a very great charge at the Soviet member" when he accused Russia of using the council for propaganda purposes and of trying to delay its work."

These charges, Kislenko said, "should be attributed not to the Soviet member but, on the contrary, to those who accuse the Soviet."

Greek Guerillas Seen Ready To Accept Proper Amnesty

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Yannina, Greece, Sept. 13 (By Cable).—The Greek guerillas who have been waging civil war in the mountains will come down and surrender if amnesty in Greece is properly administered.

This is my conclusion after talks with officials, the people in villages along the Albanian frontier toward Konitza, and the guerillas themselves.

I talked with fifteen shepherds who were captured by guerillas with their 5000 sheep, but who escaped. I interviewed scores of captive guerillas in the concentration camp in Yannina.

A Capetan—political commissar and battalion leader—who managed to get away from the rebels and surrendered, gave revealing information. He got fed up with his Communist comrades, he told me, and he predicted that the guerillas will surrender, except "those who were trained in Bulkes training camp in Yugoslavia." These men are thoroughly indoctrinated by Communist leaders.

This rebel said there were about 5000 men in the mountains who have committed major crimes and he doubted that they would come down because the amnesty will probably not cover them.

I asked him what methods would be best to reach the guerillas with news of the proposed amnesty.

"Don't worry about that," he said. "If those who come down are treated well, the news will travel rapidly. You have no idea how well-informed we are up there about conditions. The underground telephone works very well in the mountains, and once the men up there know that this offer is sincere, they will be only too glad to come down."

He estimated that in Epiros there are only about 1600 guerillas who are fighting for political reasons. The remainder are there because of crimes they have committed. They are afraid to come down.

While I was in the mountains near Konitza, artillery of the Greek army shelled guerilla positions on Mount Vovoussa. This was part of the army offensive going on. But the shelling was sporadic and altogether this corner of northern Greece is much quieter now than in July when I was last here.

There is such a general agreement on all sides here that the guerillas will come down and that the civil war will be over very soon, that it is difficult to believe otherwise. The captured or surrendered guerillas in the concentration camp here all showed great eagerness to get the details of the amnesty proposal.

Austrians Reported Joining Greek Brigade

Vienna, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Informants familiar with the Balkans reported today that Austrian war prisoners still held in Yugoslavia were being offered their freedom if they joined an international unit for training at a center near Ljubljana in northwestern Yugoslavia. Informants said such units also were in training in Albania, Bulgaria and Hungary. Many recruits were said to enlist on the representation that they would serve with an international brigade under the Greek Communist leader Markos Vifiades.

Penicillin Found Aid in Treatment Of Thrombosis

New York, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Penicillin ,the world's busiest drug, will soon take on another chore—that of aiding in the treatment of coronary thrombosis, one of the deadliest diseases of man.

Dr. David I. Macht, of Sinai Hospital, Baltimore, reported to the American Chemical Society that the drug would not be used directly in the treatment of coronary thrombosis, but would serve as a neutralizer to offset the bad effects caused by the drug, dicoumarol, in the treatment of thrombosis, clotting of the blood.

Dicoumarol, which dissolves blood clots, is so effective that sometimes it also damages the walls of arteries and veins, causing hemorrhages.

The discovery that penicillin can offset or counteract such hemorrhages was made in studies on experimental animals.

Chinese Reds Raiding South Of Yangtze

Nanking, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Chinese Communist raiders were reported attacking south of the Yangtze River today for the first time since the Japanese war.

The semi-official Central News Agency said Communist troops had penetrated Chenghsien and Nanling, respectively 45 and 30 miles southwest of Wuhu. Wuhu is only 62 miles southwest of Nanking.

Central said the bulk of Communist Gen. Liu Po-Cheng's forces, estimated at over 80,000, is operating north of Hwaining (Anking), on the Yangtze midway between Hankow and Nanking.

It was believed the attackers south of the Yangtze were remnants of the Communist Fourth Army which fought so gallantly against the Japanese and have been hiding in the Yellow Mountains since 1942.

Central said the Chinese Air Force was bombing and strafing Liu's main forces "wherever they can be found."

Restrictive Covenants

A substantial moral victory against racism has been gained by the withdrawal of the suit of nine homeowners in Bannockburn, Md., who had sought to evict Dr. Aaron Tushin, who is Jewish, from the home which he owns jointly with his wife, and to divest him of his ownership interest. The covenant in question is against "Negroes, Jews, Persians and Syrians." Now this is United Nations Week, and the Charter of the United Nations promises "universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race." President Truman has related these words to loyalty to Americanism. "When we fail to live together in peace," he once said, "the failure touches not us, as Americans, alone, but the cause of democracy itself." There would have been a "worm" in the local celebration if this suit had been pressed.

The nine plaintiffs seem to have bowed to the pressure that came from the community on the heels of the publication of their action. This pressure is as gratifying as the homeowners' decision to withdraw the suit. But the petition itself ought to be kept in some chamber of human horrors. The plaintiffs were not immediate neighbors of Dr. Tushin, nor had they any personal contact with the family, of whom Mrs. Tushin is non-Jewish. It was this latter fact that led the plaintiffs into use of language that was more extraordinary than noxious. They pleaded with the court to issue a mandatory injunction to restrain Mrs. Tushin from permitting her husband from occupying their home. In other words, the court was asked to separate man and wife! There was no mention of the children, though the logic of this Nuernberg approach would be to consign them to the street, along with their father. The kindest thing to say is that the home-owners were victims of some fast-talker.

The legal arguments brought forward to support judicial enforcement of racial covenants (which Mr. Tushin now intends to challenge in the courts) make no effort to pretend that such discrimination comports with the Constitution. It is admitted that the due process clause prevents such discrimination by State action, as the Supreme Court held 30 years ago in regard to zoning ordinances. But it is argued that covenants have a different standing because they are private agreements. The fallacy of this is that a court injunction enforcing such a covenant is certainly governmental action.

We cannot see how the due process clause, which on the one hand restrains the legislative branch of the Government from such discrimination, can be construed on the other to permit the judiciary to lend its support to the same discriminatory ends. A contrary decision by Justices Clark and Miller of our Court of Appeals this summer seems unconvincing when compared with the reasoned dissent of Justice Edgerton. And the trend of recent decisions certainly suggests that the Supreme Court, which has never squarely ruled upon the issue, will declare such covenants unenforceable.

On Eating Less

Gov. Stassen and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson have now joined the chorus of local and national leaders urging a program of voluntary rationing to meet the impending world food crisis. The man who has the distinction of being the sole avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination put the case succinctly in an address yesterday to the New York Chamber of Commerce. "We should begin at once," he declared, "a nation-wide, coordinated, voluntary food conservation program in America. Every week that goes by without the initiation of such a program means food wasted that could otherwise be saved. This is important both for Europe and for us. Unless we do this, the pressure of demand on a dwindling food supply next winter will drive our high prices even higher and increase the danger of boom and bust in the American economy."

Here in the District of Columbia, the Commissioners, along with numerous other municipal officials, have already followed the lead of New York's Mayor O'Dwyer in calling upon restaurants to refrain from serving meat two days a week and upon citizens to observe similar abstinence in their homes. The conservation of meat has a bearing on more than the price picture; it will be to a large extent determinative of the quantity of American wheat available for shipment abroad. And it is wheat, of course, that is most vitally needed to avert starvation in Europe. If the price of meat in this country continues to soar, farmers will be tempted to feed wheat to livestock. It is in part to avoid this that the conservation of meat is advocated.

In our own view, this is a tenuous, inadequate and uncertain way of dealing with the problem. It is preferable, to be sure, to no action at all. It will have the virtue of arousing the country to an awareness of the emergency. But of itself it can neither produce the wheat needed for export if America's moral obligations and political hopes are to be fulfilled, nor even bring about a wise and equitable distribution at home of a food supply inevitably scarce in relation to swollen purchasing power, though by no means insufficient for the Nation's nutritional needs. The former can be accomplished only through direct government preemption of food stocks, particularly of wheat before it is fed to cattle. The latter can be accomplished, we believe, only by a return to compulsory rationing of essential commodities. Both measures require congressional action.

Everyone now appears to be saying precisely what Senator Taft said so infelicitously the other day—that people should "eat less meat and eat less extravagantly." Perhaps the irritation aroused by this admonition stemmed from the Senator's coupling of it with a fresh denunciation of the price controls he played so large a part in destroying. A lot of people, as a survey of the District reported in The Washington Post yesterday revealed, have for some time been cutting down on their consumption of meat for the simple reason that they can't afford to buy it at present prices. Here is evidence of the unevenness of the impact of a voluntary rationing program; its sacrifices are likely to be exacted in inverse ratio to the size of one's pocketbook.

Moore's 88th

Peace almost "broke out" when the Yugoslavs decided to take over their new territory in Venezia Giulia ahead of the schedule prearranged with the Allied commanders. The confusion might have caused bloodshed. That the changeover took place without a sizable clash between the Yugoslavs and the Anglo-American forces (though Yugoslavs and Italians indulged in free-for-alls all over the Istrian Peninsula) was due to the fact that the Anglo-American command seems to have been expecting Marshal Tito to pitch what Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, commanding the Eighty-eighth Division, called a curved ball. What he meant was that Tito was out to make trouble.

That is what he has been doing since the end of the war. He has never carried out in spirit the undertaking that Yugoslavia signed at Dwino dividing Venezia Giulia into occupation zones under joint control pending the peace settlement. At one post on the Izonzo, with Yugoslavs on one bank and Americans on the other, the Yugoslavs actually banned the use of the cooling river to the American troops. Indeed, Tito has been deterred from violating the compact and taking over the whole of Venezia Giulia only by the presence on the Morgan Line of the Anglo-American forces.

The American position covered 60 miles along the Julian Alps, with headquarters at Goritzia. Night and day the passes and roads over the mountains were under guard by the "Blue Devils," as members of the Eighty-eighth Division were known in the Italian campaign. Brushes with the Yugoslavs were frequent, and it was only the unsleeping watchfulness of the Eighty-eighth, together with the steely determination of General Moore, that prevented Tito from rushing the American position long before the peace settlement was made in Paris. General Moore, as was shown on Monday, has never taken the slightest chance with Marshal Tito. In case Tito might try to take Goritzia, either through the Tito agents who honeycombed Venezia Giulia or through an enveloping attack across the mountains, Gen. eral Moore maintained a duplicate headquarters and communications center in an old castle north of Goritzia.

From time to time we have noted with pride the fine job that our Eighty-eighth Division have done. It is no exaggeration to say that they have established a new tradition for the United States Army. To keep the peace in a frenzied situation is to fulfill a duty calling for the finest quality of soldierliness. That quality is difficult to define. It is compounded of an unflinching courage of a far greater order than the courage required on the battlefield. For over two years the Eighty-eighth held a position against odds, stayed alert when surrounded by hostility, remained impervious to temptations either to hate or to shoot, and provided a constant example of authority. Only the Finns have a word for this quality: sisu.

The experience made them all seasoned diplomats. Without it they could not possibly have weathered the crisis at the gates of Trieste. Here they had been withdrawn after the quickened order to retire from the Morgan Line was carried out. Again the Yugoslavs tried to rush them off their feet, but they stood firm. "Owing to the extraordinary good sense and tactful handling by the American troops," said the British commander in chief, "an incident was prevented." He spoke of the commanding behavior of a handful of Americans facing a howling mob of Yugoslavs. What hung upon that behavior can only be guessed at. It might possibly have been the beginning not of peace but of a new hell.

Richard Le Gallienne

Richard Le Gallienne, who died last Sunday at Menton, France, at the age of 81, might properly be described as the last of the romantics. That is to say, he belonged in the tradition of Swinburne, Dowson and Rostand—a tradition which was, of course, ascendant when he came to the notice of American readers in 1896 with The Quest of the Golden Girl. He was a lyric poet of no inconsiderable talent, and, like his elder contemporary Stevenson, an admirable prose stylist. But, like the great majority of writers of his generation, which was still under the influence of Pater and Wilde, his work was much more remarkable for manner and technical excellence than for its content.

This perhaps amounts to a polite way of observing that, whether as a poet or as a critic, Le Gallienne had very little to say. But it is also true that writers who are not of the first rank—and to this he never pretended—have the right to be judged in the context of their own times. It was Le Gallienne's misfortune to have been born in an age when almost everything worth saying had already been said. But even this is to do him less than justice; for in his own arty way he was a man of intellectual courage—courage enough, for example, to challenge the philistine spirit in politics as well as in letters.

In an age when imperialism was fashionable, both in his native Britain and in the United States, he had the courage to be a pacifist. And to those who derided the sort of literature he represented as a decadent escapism, feeding upon illusion, he retorted that militarism was also an escapism and one which feeds upon even more pernicious illusions.

Monetary Fund

The arrangement by which the British will withdraw from the Monetary Fund 60 million dollars in exchange for pounds sterling is in no sense the kind of "stopgap business" which the Fund's executive director, Camille Gutt, has just gone on record as opposing. For the dollars obtained from the Fund, in accordance with provisions governing its operations, will be used to meet current payments abroad in connection with foreign trade. Transactions of this kind to help relieve maladjustments in international balances of payments should not be confused with long-term relief or reconstruction loans of the kind desired by Hugh Dalton, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer—loans that would entail changes in Monetary Fund regulations and destroy the Fund's usefulness as an exchange stabilizing agency.

The Monetary Fund has already made 50 million dollars available to France and has supplied the Netherlands with six million dollars and 1.5 millions in pounds sterling. The British transaction is, therefore, just another case of providing temporary exchange assistance to a member country. It is, however, a reminder that the Monetary Fund is likely to be confronted by increasing demands for dollars from hard-pressed members as a result of the present acute emergency. All such applications will have to be carefully scrutinized to make sure that resources thus obtained are not misapplied.

In their annual report issued last week the executive directors of the Monetary Fund warned that it could give "only limited financial help in the present situation" and also pointed out that its resources are not intended for reconstruction. The report stressed the fact that the Fund is a permanent agency whose ultimate objectives (promotion of exchange stability and avoidance of competitive exchange devaluation) can only be realized in a "world in which the war-damaged and war-devastated countries have restored their productive efficiency to the point where they can achieve balance in their international payments with a level of trade conducive to their own and the general well-being." In short, the seriously unbalanced state of world trade must be redressed by speeding up production. By such means alone can distressed countries provide themselves with goods needed to hasten reconstruction and acquire exportable surpluses to pay for their imports and balance their international payments at high trade levels.

Additional large-scale aid will, of course, be necessary to sustain weak economies for the time being, apart from the limited assistance that can be safely provided by the International Bank and the Monetary Fund. But in final analysis, solution of the economic problems responsible for the unbalanced state of world trade and its accompaniment—disordered currencies—lies in self-help. And, as stated in its annual report, the "role which the Fund will be able to play in the future must inevitably be determined in large measure by the way in which these problems are solved."

Olney's Season

Olney, according to Richard L. Coe, has "given the Nation's Capital the best summer theater it's had since Thespis took to the woods." This achievement is, in a sense, the more noteworthy for the fact that the management chose to operate on what might be called the American plan. This is to say, persons who purchased tickets were admitted without being obliged to submit to any blood test or ordeal by ancestry and without regard to the color of their skins. Yet no disorder of any kind resulted from this display of decency; human beings sharing an interest in the drama managed to sit side by side at Olney, despite differences in racial background, without any apparent friction or even discomfort. Moreover, the public attended in droves that kept the SRO sign out most of the summer.

NUTHATCH

Strange little bird, have you confused
the forests of the sky with those of earth that, topsy-turvy,
you survey the world
head downward, in reverse?
If you are bird at all why do you fold your wings, to creep and crawl
over the rugged bark, from branch to branch, stopping to "hatch"
a beech-or-butternut?
O little creature, upside down, absurd,
are you indeed a tree-mouse or a bird?

Tax Duplication

Edwin Mason & Co., publishers of the Hometown Gazette, in midyear changed the firm's name to the Hometown Gazette Co. No changes are made in employes, plant or paper.

During the first half of the year Social Security taxes in many cases reach the maximum ($30), after which deductions are discontinued. However, because the firm name has been changed, the same employes are subjected again to deductions which admittedly become overpayment on their Social Security accounts. The excess will subsequently be refunded, but only when application is made therefor by the individual on form certified by the employer, mailed to the Social Security Board for adjustment of account and verification, and eventually a check for the excess deduction is drawn by the Treasury and mailed to the individual.

In making quarterly returns of Social Security deductions, the simple designation "Edwin Mason & Co., the Hometown Gazette Co., Successors," or "the Hometown Gazette Co., formerly Edwin Mason & Co." for Social Security purposes would be a practical way to keep things straight. But this would be too simple. Uncle Sam loves red tape, complicated bookkeeping, making out checks and mailing same, all of which could be eliminated by the one simple operation as suggested above.

Taxes are withheld from payments made to employes, but despite advance knowledge that surplus accumulation will be refunded, the process in obtaining the refund results in a delay of from six months to years. The Government certainly does things the hard way! A. MAJOWER.

Masaryk's Example

Ten years ago, on September 14, the life of a truly great democratic leader, Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, the founder and first President of Czechoslovak Republic, came to an end. His constant struggle for the freedom and democratic life of his people should give us strength and inspiration as we are trying desperately to prevent the making of another world disaster.

He was a man of unshakable faith, and an explorer of common good in people. "Truth shall prevail" was his simple and yet powerful slogan. On this principle he built the first Czechoslovak Republic, indeed a model of American democracy. He was the Lincoln, Wilson and Roosevelt of Czechoslovakia. Like Lincoln, who once said, "God must have loved the common people, because he made so many of them," Masaryk built a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

As is well known to us all, that government came to an abrupt end in September 1938, 20 years after it was created. Evil forces today are hindering the progress of rebuilding the Czechoslovakia we once knew, as well as the peace we are trying to establish. In these days of discord and distrust we must look up to men like Masaryk was—willing to dedicate their lives to the making of a better and saner world. J. A. N.

Mixing Margarine

Are we women sheep, or fools, or what are we?

I mashed margarine all during the war, when we spent half our time standing in line—mashed away, putting in the coloring that it is illegal for the manufacturers to put in painlessly. It's a little job? Let those legislators who passed the law to please the butter lobby try doing it! A messy, tiring wasteful and inefficient job. And completely unnecessary.

But we're just women who have to do it. We don't understand those things. Life is so easy for us nowadays, what does one more extra job matter?

Yuhas Resignation

Despite repeated assurances by competent quarters as to the fairness and objectivity with which the current Federal loyalty investigations are to be carried out, the deplorable case of Miss Helen Yuhas, personal secretary to Undersecretary of State Clayton, confronts every Federal employe with new cause for apprehension, if not dismay.

Her nforced resignation from the department presumably because she is of eastern European descent and for a few months during wartime had been injudicious enough to work for the Soviet Embassy Information Bulletin, brings her to the uneasy attention of those United States Government employes who, perhaps justifiably, entertain serious reservations as to the impartiality and fair-mindedness with which the President's Loyalty Order is being placed in operation.

The seriousness of Miss Yuhas' removal lies in the fact that apparently no attempt has been made to permit her to be heard formally in her own defense. You will perhaps agree that this case should be aired, without delay, through an impartial hearing, and if no reasonable evidence of Miss Yuhas' unsuitability for employment in the State Department can be adduced, she should be restored to her job with full payment of lost salary.

The Tushin Case

Everyone knows that racial restrictive covenants sound at variance with the lofty pronouncements of our Constitution and Declaration of Independence. But few, perhaps, other than our long-suffering largest minority group, have realized the absolutely anti-social consequences of enforcing these iniquitous contracts. However, anyone who will look can see the effects of allowing such un-American conspiracies to come into the courts to effectuate their evil designs by considering the case of Mr. Aaron Tushin in Bannockburn Heights, who happens to be a member of the Jewish faith.

To literally enforce the covenant which provides that no person of Semitic blood or race shall occupy property in the subdivision, would mean that Mr. Tushin would be forced to leave his wife and their three children, ages one to 14, or else give up his home in which he has invested much money and time and seek housing with them elsewhere.

There is no essential difference in the thinking of signers of racial restrictive covenants and Hitler's Herrenvolk, and there is no place for either in our country. What is even more shocking to one's sense of justice is that the States are prohibited by constitutional limitations from enacting any zoning ordinances which prevent any person from occupying an area by reason of race, creed, or color, and yet these covenantees could enter the Maryland courts to have the State do for them what the State could not do for itself, if it so desired. That such a state of affairs does mortal violence to the spirit of our Constitution should be apparent without resort to any refined logic.
JULIUS W. ROBERTSON.
Washington.

Can anyone show proof that a gentile is of the superior race? One can only be inferior when he has the breeding in him that sets him against another because he is of a different religious faith.

A thorough review of the principles of Christianity which, strangely enough, happen to be the principles of any human, tolerant religion, and stems from the Jewish religion, would help many of the poor maladjusted souls who think the word Christian attached to their names absolves them from showing kindness and common human decency when it is asked of them. MRS. C. LEVICH.
Washington.

It would be one thing to say that any person who has criminal tendencies or who personally is obnoxious or offensive, may be required by the law to sell his home and leave a neighborhood. It is a very different thing to say that because of one's race or religion, regardless of one's personal qualities, a man is hopelessly proscribed.

Our fathers came to America because it was a land of opportunity, a land where a man was judged by his own qualities, and not by his accident of birth. Millions of men have fought and bled for that ideal; it was a cause worth fighting for.
GEORGE E. BEAUCHAMP,
Leader, the Washington Ethical Society.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Garber, according to your story, have signed a petition to oust the family of Aaron Tushin on the ground that he is Jewish and that his occupancy of a house on Wilson Lane is causing the protestors "irreparable damage" . . . Garber is chief of the field service, Bureau of the Budget.

How can a man of this mental caliber perform objectively the duties which are assigned to him in the Federal Government?
CITIZEN.

Being a veteran, of some highly active overseas service, I do not recall Mr. Garber's voicing any objections of "irreparable damage" caused by the spilling of good Negro, Persian or Jewish blood to make him secure in his exclusive settlement.

Isn't it possible for all of us to have the right to enjoy in constitutional equality those privileges for which so many of all Americans have given so much?

Loosing Mental Apron Strings

By Malvina Lindsay

Students at Large

ABOUT 1500 YOUNG Americans are returning home this month from a summer's study and work in Europe—and from their first large-scale exposure to communism and socialism.

At the same time the Board of Foreign Scholarships, created under the Fulbright Act, is starting machinery moving whereby during the next 20 years, starting probably next fall, about 2000 students will go to foreign countries annually to study. Students also are going abroad increasingly on their own or through aid of organizations, as did those this summer, of whom possibly 3000 are still in Europe.

How has this European experience affected American boys and girls? What preparation will students of the future need to be thus cut loose from mental apron strings?

Isolationists who predicted these students would all be turned into Communists, or at least come home "with their heads full of foreign notions" were poor prophets. But some rockribbed conservatives may be shocked to find them more politically independent, more questioning of hollow, spread-eagle patriotism and of party platitudes.

THESE YOUNG people had a vigorous time holding their own in the battle of ideas, as they often found their European colleagues more interested in political discussion than in jitterbugging. Also they found their own way of life much on the defensive. As a result, many have become more aware of the weaknesses of their democratic system (and eager to remedy them) but also more devoted to the personal freedom and opportunity it provides, and to its tolerant, middle way of doing things.

Helped by an orientation program conducted on their boats by the American Friends Service Committee, the students were not as inarticulate and flabbergasted as many Americans find themselves when facing fanatical exponents of other ideologies. They were prepared to explain the American system in terms other than of indoor plumbing and banana split sundaes.

Surprising to some of these students lately from a country where all "isms" are suspect was the sight of young Communists proudly wearing their buttons, expounding their beliefs. Also surprising to these young people schooled in the Anglo-Saxon tradition of compromise was the completely inflexible stand for a party line taken by young Communists.

In Western Socialist Europe the students, after seeing Europe's new approach to its problems, generally felt America had a better answer. All of them now have a clearer picture of what is going on abroad. State Department authorities who facilitated—but did not pay—for the student tours believe the biggest value of these is that this country is thus getting a nucleus of young citizens that will bring realistic understanding to the foreign problems now piling up. They see these students as an important beginning in the big job of preparing Americans for world leadership.

AFTER A LOOK at other cultures and political systems, Americans generally prize most of all their freedom to express themselves in speech and action, to go where they please, do the work they want to do, build their lives without dictation. Returning students generally are no exception to this. The problem now is how to make all young Americans, especially those who will travel abroad, realize this and prepare them to expound it as zealously as young Communists do their faith.

Many GIs and other Americans abroad have tried to explain American life wholly in terms of drug stores and motor cars. This is partly to blame for Americans being so widely regarded as materialists. Most of them realize their way of life is founded on something far deeper than their standard of living, but they are not prepared to express this.

Many returning students say their greatest gain of the summer was the floating university that an eminent faculty assembled by the Friends provided for them going to and returning from Europe. The lectures, classes, "bull" sessions, melting-pot contacts, gave them a memorable experience in Americanism. Plans now being made to send future students abroad should include similar preparation to make them effective emissaries of their country.

Tangier Island

After reading your article in The Washington Post of September 6 on the power plant for Smith and Tangier Islands, I felt I must give you the facts. The idea, that the people there never saw a car before! For one thing, Tangier is only a short distance from Washington and there aren't three people on the island who haven't been to Baltimore or Washington.

The power plant only recently broke down. Due to the war, it was impossible to get new parts for the plant, and since it was old, it was decided to improve it. All this was less than two years ago, not 10 years. Furthermore, they do have telephones.

I, for one, wish and pray that the truth would be published about Tangier Island and Smith Island, just once. ADELE DISPENZA.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War VIII

Lippmann

I AM contending that the American diplomatic effort should be concentrated on the problem created by the armistice—which is how the continent of Europe can be evacuated by the three non-European armies which are now inside Europe. This is the problem which will have to be solved if the independence of the European nations is to be restored. Without that there is no possibility of a tolerable peace. But if these armies withdraw, there will be a very different balance of power in the world than there is today, and one which cannot easily be upset. For the nations of Europe, separately and in groups, perhaps even in unity, will then, and then only, cease to be the stakes and the pawns of the Russian-American conflict.

The material cause and reason of the conflict will have been dealt with.

THE TERMS of the problem were defined at Yalta in the winter of 1945. There, with a victory over Germany in sight, Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin made a military settlement which fixed the boundaries where the converging armies were to meet, and were to wait while the governments negotiated the terms of peace which would provide for the withdrawal of the armies. The crucial issue in the world today is whether the Yalta military boundary, which was intended to be provisional for the period of the armistice, is to become the political boundary of two hostile coalitions.

The Yalta line registered an agreed estimate by Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin as to what would be the actual military situation at the close of hostilities. They knew that the Red Army would be in Warsaw, Bucharest, Budapest, Belgrade and Sofia. So Churchill and Roosevelt recognized that the military boundary for the armistice would place eastern Europe within the Soviet sphere. The British, on the other hand, were in Athens; the British-Americans were in Italy; therefore, Stalin recognized that Italy and Greece would be within the British and American sphere. The Americans, it was evident, were paramount in the Pacific and would play the leading part in the defeat of Japan. So the United States was recognized as the paramount power in Japan. There was some doubt as to where the Red Army and the western armies would meet in Germany and Austria. The Yalta line was, therefore, the result of a combined military estimate of where they would probably find themselves when the German resistance had finally been crushed. Actually the Americans advanced beyond that line. But at Yalta it was by no means certain that they would reach that line, and there is excellent authority for saying, that Mr. Churchill felt he had made as good a bargain as British-American military prospects warranted.

THE YALTA line in the Far East was settled on the same basis—that is to say, on an agreed estimate of the balance of power at the close of hostilities. There has been, I believe, a misunderstanding about this in the United States. The concessions made to Stalin by Roosevelt and Churchill have been represented as being the price they paid for Soviet intervention in the Japanese war. The concessions, it is then said, were unnecessary. For Japan was already defeated or would soon have been, what with the blockade, the air raids and the atomic bomb, and therefore no price need have been paid for Soviet participation.

Now it may be true, probably it is true, that Roosevelt and the American military command overestimated the strength of Japan, and that in agreeing to the Soviet claims they thought they were paying a price that had to be paid if the Japanese war was to be won completely and fairly soon. But, in fact, the Russians were in a position to occupy the territory they asked for, and more besides, whether or not they entered the war. Their armies were on the borders of Manchuria and northern China, and ours were not. The concessions which Roosevelt and Churchill made to Stalin in the Far East were less than the Soviet Union had the power to take by its own force. Nothing was in fact conceded to Stalin that Roosevelt and Churchill could, if they had been put to the test, have been able to withhold.

THE YALTA military boundary was the datum line from which the diplomatic settlement of the war had necessarily to begin. It was, I believe, at this juncture that American diplomacy became confused, lost sight of the primary and essential objective, and became entangled in all manner of secondary issues and disputes in the Russian borderlands.

The British and the Americans, of course, could not accept the permanent division of the European continent along the Yalta line. They could not accept a settlement in which Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria would lose all independence and become incorporated as Soviet republics in the U.S.S.R. They had a debt of honor to the countless patriots in those lands. They realized that if the frontiers of the Soviet system were extended as far west as the middle of Germany and Austria, then not only Germany and Austria but all western Europe might fall within the Russian sphere of influence and be dominated by the Soviet Union.

Thus for the best of reasons and with the best of motives they came to the conclusion that they must wage a diplomatic campaign to prevent Russia from expanding her sphere, to prevent her from consolidating it, and to compel her to contract it. But they failed to see clearly that until the Red Army evacuated eastern Europe and withdrew to the frontiers of the Soviet Union, none of these objectives could be achieved.

HAD THEY seen clearly the significance of the military situation, they would not have committed the United States to anything in eastern Europe while the Soviet government had the power to oppose it, while the United States had no power to enforce it. They would have taken and noted the pledges and promises to respect the independence and the freedom of the nations of eastern Europe which Stalin gave them at Yalta. But they would not have committed the United States to a guarantee that Stalin would keep his pledges while his army was occupying eastern Europe.

For since the United States could not make good this guarantee, the onus of the violation of the pledges was divided between the Russians, who broke them, and the Americans, who had promised to enforce them and did not. It would have been far better to base our policy on the realities of the balance of power; to let Stalin, who made the promises which he alone could fulfill, take the whole responsibility for breaking them; to concentrate our effort on treaties of peace which would end the occupation of Europe.

FOR IF, and only if, we can bring about the withdrawal of the Red Army from the Yalta line to the new frontier of the Soviet Union,—and simultaneously, of course, the withdrawal of the British and American armies from continental Europe,—can a balance of power be established which can then be maintained. For after the withdrawal, an attempt to return would be an invasion,—an open, unmistakable act of military aggression. Against such an aggression, the power of the United States to strike the vital centers of Russia by air and by amphibious assault would stand as the opposing and deterrent force. And until treaties are agreed to which bring about the withdrawal of the Red Army, the power of the United States to strike these vital centers would be built up for the express purpose of giving weight to our policy of ending the military occupation of Europe.

All the other pressures of the Soviet Union at the "constantly shifting geographical and political points," which Mr. X is so concerned about,—in the Middle East and in Asia—are, I contend, secondary and subsidiary to the fact that its armed forces are in the heart of Europe. It is to the Red Army in Europe, therefore, and not to ideologies, elections, forms of government, to socialism, to communism, to free enterprise, that a correctly conceived and soundly planned policy should be directed.

Deadline In Greece

ATHENS, GREECE—Reports of troop movements in the north, coupled with rumors of an armed uprising in Athens, this past summer sent the rich of the city scurrying to the waterfront to buy their way out of the country. They paid 50 gold sovereigns—$1500 in American money at the legal rate—for an option on a seat in a sailing vessel. They agreed, if they took up the option, to pay an additional 150 sovereigns. This, mind you, for merely a place to sit in a small boat that would presumably make Turkey or Egypt.

Childs

This is the measure of the fear and uncertainty that hang like a cloud over troubled Greece. It's estimated a billion dollars of Greek capital is in safe havens abroad, and American Aid Director Dwight Griswold frankly admits he's not sure any way can be found to compel the owners of the money to return it to Greece.

It's just here that Griswold and his staff come up against their greatest single handicap—that deadline on June 30, 1948. Informed Greeks know as well as do the Americans here that, unless Congress takes further action, the paid program will be wound up after that date.

Greeks keep telling themselves it can't possibly happen. And most Americans feel that only the smallest beginning will have been made by that time. Yet the date of June 30, now only nine months away, stares everyone in the face.

TALKING ABOUT the deadline and what it means, a member of the aid-mission staff, with two years experience in Greece, described the program sardonically as a "breadline with guns." He was in a pessimistic mood. It's more than that, of course. But Americans here and at home should understand the very narrow limits of what is being undertaken.

The total sum to be spent or committed before June 30 is 350 million dollars. During 1945 and 1946, about 800 million dollars was spent on Greek relief by UNRRA and other agencies. Granted that some of this was badly misspent. Granted that it brought some improvement in the health and well-being of the Greeks. No one could argue, however, that 400 million dollars annually has checked deterioration and started the nation back to something like a normal existence.

THIS CAN happen only when the Greeks themselves begin to believe in the stability of their country. In the view of those with experience here, only a long-term agreement for three, four or five years can bring that about. That kind of commitment, signed and sealed by Congress, would start a current of confidence. It would begin to bring about investment of Greek money by Greeks in Greece. Perhaps as much as 75 million dollars a year in capital investment would be forthcoming the first year or two. That is a sizable sum for Greece.

Of the 300-million-dollar mission budget—the additional 50 million dollars comes from the European relief fund—roughly half was committed to rehabilitation and reconstruction. That may be cut down in response to pressure for a larger allocation to the military. Compared with the needs of a country broken by war and revolution, it's ridiculously small.

A considerable part will go for rebuilding roads and restoring destroyed dock facilities at Piraeus. Road construction will be useful because it will give jobs. But so far as getting the economy of Greece started again is concerned, it must be rated at WPA level or even below it.

There are small hopeful portents, and Americans snatch at them. On the main highway leading to the Corinth Canal, the Greeks themselves have improvised a kind of voluntary system of road-mending. But, again measured by need, even the original road-building program, now just in the beginning stages, is pathetically small. The highway and railroad system is almost completely smashed. The desperate lack of transportation is one reason for high prices and the black market.

"Greece is bleeding from deep wounds hardly apparent to the visitor, who sees only the noisy bustle of Athens." That was said by a Greek who has lived, and lived heroically, through the Greek tragedy of the last 12 years.

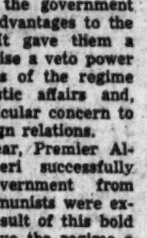
He was speaking of the bitterness and bloodshed of the civil war in the north. It applies equally well to the economy. The economic lifeblood of Greece has been all but drained away. The American program can perhaps staunch the flow and thereby stave off bankruptcy. The real need is for a series of major economic transfusions, and they are beyond the capacity of the present aid program.

Turmoil In Italy

By Barnet Nover

The Reds Flex Their Muscles

GIUSEPPE DI VITTORIO, the Communist secretary general of the Italian Confederation of Labor, has denied that the underlying purpose of the strikes and demonstrations now convulsing Italy is to bring about a revolution.



NOVER

So far as the immediate objectives of the Italian Communists are concerned, this is probably the case. To be sure, Vitt[illegible]tatement does not exacti[illegible] with the statement recently [illegible]e at Modena by Palmiro Togliatti, the man from whom he takes orders and who, in turn, takes orders from the Kremlin.

Togliatti said:

"We have 30,000 well-armed Partisans at our disposal and if the government does not give us prompt proof of its democratic spirit we shall have to fight because only by fighting can we obtain any positive results."

This was a bluff with a barb at its tip, but a bluff nonetheless. Togliatti is perfectly well aware that at this particular moment the chances are very much better than even that an armed uprising would fail, possibly destroying the Italian Communist Party in the process.

WHAT TOGLIATTI is primarily after at this time is not the seizure of power but the sharing of power. He wants the reconstitution of the coalition that ran Italy from the time of its liberation until some months ago, a coalition that included Communists and their allies, the left-wing Socialists led by Pietro Nenni as well as representatives of the more moderate parties.

Being inside the government had very real advantages to the Communists. It gave them a chance to exercise a veto power over the actions of the regime both in domestic affairs and, what is of particular concern to Russia, in foreign relations.

Early this year, Premier Alcide de Gasperi successfully formed a government from which the Communists were excluded. The result of this bold move was to give the regime a freedom of movement it had not previously enjoyed.

Ever since, however, the Communists have had their knives out for De Gasperi. They are now beginning to exercise their vast talents for troublemaking.

THEIR MISCHIEF-MAKING capacity stems not only from the fact that the Italian Communist Party is, in number of actual adherents the largest in western Europe, but even more from the circumstance that they control the Confederation of Labor which has 5,500,000 members.

It would be a mistake to assume that the strikes which the Communists have inspired and fomented were solely political and had no basis in economic grievances. In a country where inflation is rampant, which lacks the means to finance essential imports of food, fuel and raw materials, which has close to three million unemployed, discontent is bound to be widespread.

The Communists are capitalizing this state of affairs. But the method they have employed to do so can only worsen Italy's plight and the plight of the workers whose interests they profess to have at heart.

THERE IS method in their madness. Despite fantastic obstacles, Italy has managed to achieve a surprising measure of recovery from a war that hit her with particularly devastating force.

Should the Marshall Plan be carried out, Italy will benefit. At the Paris conference Italy has played a great part and has made a real contribution to the discussions.

The last thing in the world that Russia wants is to have western Europe, with American aid, pull itself out of its present desperate situation. From the moment Viacheslav Molotov walked out of the Paris talks, the Kremlin has engaged in an unceasing campaign of propaganda against the Marshall Plan.

Now, in Italy, the second stage of this campaign of attrition has been initiated. The present wave of Communist-inspired strikes in the peninsula is intended to have one or more of the following purposes:

1. Weaken the De Gasperi government to the point where it is forced to throw in the sponge, thus leaving the path open for a regime which will include the Communists and Socialists. Once back in the government the extreme left-wing elements could then seek to bring about in Italy that succession of events which, in Bulgaria, Romania, Poland, Hungary and elsewhere led to the setting up of a Communist-dominated regime.

2. Throw Italy's economy, which has slowly been moving forward, into reverse. This would make necessary a larger measure of American aid to Italy. The Communists are gambling that Congress will be disinclined to give Italy and the other countries of western Europe even a modest degree of assistance. Increasing economic distress would help win new adherents to communism.

3. If the weakness of the De Gasperi government proves greater than is now anticipated, if it shows an incapacity to maintain order, it will bring about a Communist coup d'etat.

The danger is, as Togliatti no doubt realizes, that the Communists will overplay their hand. The Italian people, and even their own followers, may not be fooled by Communist tactics and may turn against them. In the meantime, however, there is no discounting the seriousness of the situation in the peninsula. It is not yet civil war. But it may prove to be the prelude to civil war.

W. Virginia Governor Favors Alliance of C. & O. and N. Y. C.

By The Associated Press

Gov. Clarence W. Meadows of West Virginia said yesterday that a working alliance between the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and the New York Central Railroad would greatly benefit industry in his state.

Meadows testified at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the proposals of Robert R. Young and Robert J. Bowman, board chairman and president, respectively, of the C&O, that they be allowed to sit on the NYC board without giving up their present positions with C&O.

Young later told the ICC that allowing him and Bowman to sit on the New York Central Railroad Board would not mean letting them take "working control" of Central.

"We would not think of exercising control without the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission," Young said. "We could have no control without ICC approval."

The Governor told the ICC:

"The alliance of the C&O with a large transportation system that reaches extensive markets would unquestionably help West Virginia coal production.

"West Virgnia coal producers will need this expanded outlet when the present abnormal export and domestic demand subsides. Therein lies the strong interest of West Virginia and her people—namely a sound bituminous coal industry and the many industries dependent on it. Such basically affects the whole economy of the State."

C. & O. officials have testified that New York Central needs a Chesapeake affiliation (1) to obtain the soft coal movement required in its own operations and by the congested industrial areas served by Central, and (2) Chesapake in turn desires to participate in the movement of manufactured goods originated on the Central lines.

Meadows said the Pennsylvania Railroad has a "sister road" in the Norfolk & Western, a large coal carrier, "which illustrates the advantages of a large coal supply source and a delivery outlet put together and working as a unit."

Meadows testified after C. & O. had presented Dr. Julius Grodinsky, associate professor of finance at University of Pennsylavnia, as an expert on railroad operations.

Grodinsky said that the development of a "limited number" of strong competing systems in the East would bring about reduced operating costs and "pave the way for lower rates, higher standards of railroad service to the public, and increase earning power "in the enhancement of the credit standing of their securities."

He said a unification of Chesapeake and New York Central would produce "financial strength to compete more effectively with the ever-growing list of competitive transportation agents." He mentioned the "pipe line, the waterway, the truck, the bus and airplane."

Cross-examined by attorneys for the Virginian Railway Company and a number of communities in Virginia and West Virginia served by that line, Meadows said his endorsement of the plan was based on "overall considerations for the good of the State."

Parker McColister, representing Packard Motor Car Co. and the Chrysler Corp. in opposition to the Young-Bowman petition, asked:

"Are your citizens interested in this matter as buyers of goods as well as sellers of coal?"

When Meadows replied affirmatively, McColister said Packard and Chrysler are contending that it has been C. & O. policy to oppose lower freight rates on new cars moving out of Detroit. He asserted that New York Central has campaigned for lower rates, and that it is "assumed" that Young and Bowman would influence Central to take another position if they go on Central's board.

No Action Taken In Clegg Case; Barrett Silent

No action was taken yesterday in the Clegg case.

Julius Willie Clegg, 26-year-old negro war veteran and an employe of The Washington Post, has charged that he was beaten by two policemen after his arrest resulting from a woman's complaint that lewd remarks were made to her. Clegg was never identified as the man involved.

The District Grand Jury on Tuesday refused to return an indictment in the case.

Charges against the policemen have not yet been received by the Corporation Counsel's office for possible action in a Police Trial Board proceeding.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, refused to comment.

Sisters, 8 and 10, Found by Father In Woods at 3 A. M.

Barbara Sarratt, 10, and her sister Sylvia, 8, were safe at their home at 4648 Hilltop ter. se., yesterday after spending most of Tuesday night in nearby woods.

The two children wandered off shortly after dinner Tuesday night, and were missed by their mother, Mrs. Irving Sarratt about 6:30 p. m. A crowd of neighbors and police searched the woods until after midnight, but found only a comb belonging to one of the children.

Irving Sarratt, their father, joined the search when he returned from work with the Washington Gas Light Co. at 10:30 p. m.

At about 3 a. m. Sarratt returned to the woods about 600 yards behind the house, where he thought the children might have gone to play in a sand pile. They were there.

AIB Chapter Revives Three Courses Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Three courses will be revived this year by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, it was revealed last night at the annual fall educational dinner in the Mayflower Hotel. Classes will begin October 6.

In addition to the regular pre-standard and standard courses, classes in Trust Business, Bank Administration and Public Speaking will be restored after a few years' lapse, according to Herbert D. Lawson, jr., chairman of the chapter's educational committee, who presided at last night's meeting.

Value of classes for junior bankers was emphasized in a talk by Dr. William A. Irwin, national educational director of the AIB. More than 65 active institute workers attended the meeting.

Washington AIB Chapter was formed 46 years ago by a group of young Washington bankers, most of whom are today's profession leaders here.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—While wheat and corn ended lower, oats displayed comparative strength on the board of trade today. At one time the firmness of oats encouraged buying of other cereals, but a late expansion in selling orders forced wheat and corn below the previous close.

Local traders led the oats buying, which was aided by rumors that the Government might export oats and oatmeal to compensate for a decline in wheat shipments. After the close, November export allocations were announced and made no provision for oats.

Wheat ended ⅛ to 4 cents lower, September, 2.77; corn was ¾@2¼ lower, September, 2.62½@2.61¾, and oats were ½ lower to 1½ higher, September, 1.20½@1.20½.

Wheat was aided for a time by reports of Government buying of the cash grain at Minneapolis, but eventually this was outweighed as a market influence by forecasts for rain in the Southwestern winter wheat belt and possibility that margins will be increased.

The Commodity Credit Corporation at Minneapolis was estimated to have taken nearly two million bushels of wheat over the past two days. From September 12 through September 18 that office announced it bought 335,000 bushels. The Kansas City office said it was out of the market, while the Chicago office said it would "entertain offers."

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Cotton futures today experienced the heaviest hedge selling of the season so far, with final prices 1.25 to 2.90 a bale lower.

The market also absorbed a fair amount of profit taking orders which were induced by request that President Truman call a parley to cope with the rise in living costs.

Traders explained that the recent rise in cotton prices has finally attracted producer selling of new crop cotton. On the decline textile mills bought.

Jury Again Refuses to Act In N. Carolina Lynch Case

Warrenton, N. C., Sept. 17 (AP).—For the second time within the last six weeks, a North Carolina grand jury today refused to return indictments against white defendants in connection with the attempted lynching of a young Negro.

Announcement of the grand jury's action today—which freed two white men—came immediately after Warren County Superior Court was reconvened.

After the announcement, the defendants—Joe Cunningham, assistant theater manager at Rich Square in Northampton County, and Northampton Jailer A. W. Edwards—were called before the bar and Judge W. C. Harris ordered them released.

Cunningham was alleged to have been one of seven masked men who took Godwin (Buddy) Bush from the Northampton jail at gunpoint after he had been arrested last may on a charge of attempted rape of a Rich Square woman. Bush made a dash for freedom and got away.

At a hearing Edwards told of turning Bush over to the mob, and admitted he had not been threatened, or subjected to any force.

Judge Frizzelle dismissed charges against the six men named with Cunningham.

For Church Work

General Lee Flying Home From Europe

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 17 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commander of United States forces in the Mediterranean theater, left here by plane today for the United States, where he will retire after 42 years as a professional soldier and devote himself to helping "people quit fighting each other."

Lee said he and his wife had offered their services to the presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church and hoped to "work for Christian unity." He declined to comment on rumors that he would return to Italy as special envoy to the Vatican.

Before leaving Mediterranean command headquarters at Leghorn, Italy, today, the general turned over the reins to Maj. Gen. Lawrence Jaynes, deputy commander.

Lee's command had been under investigation since last month after charges by newspaper Columnist Robert C. Ruark that enlisted personnel in the theater were being mistreated, while officers were coddled.

Lee's request for retirement had been filed before the investigation began, the Army said.

Fisheries Board Warns Against Illegal Seining

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—Illegal dragging of seines to catch fish in Maryland waters "must be eliminated in the interest of conservation and harmony in the industry," the Tidewater Fisheries Commission ruled today.

In a statement after a regular meeting, the commission set up its own interpretation of law regarding dragging—a method of taking numbers of fish in one quick haul.

The interpretation of the law sets forth that one end of a haul seine must be fixed by stake or anchored ashore "or as near mean low water" as can be determined, provided the end of the net anchored does not extend beyond 3 feet in depth.

"Use of more than one motor boat in a seining operation will be considered dragging and illegal and if one end of the net is not affixed as described above the seiner will be considered in violation of hauling a seine in other than the customary manner and will be in violation of the law," the commission said.

Va. Woman Sues Six Publishers

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Six suits, totaling $900,000, have been filed in Federal Court here by Mrs. Grace M. Smith of Harrisonburg, Va., against six detective story magazine publishers, charging that the publications printed libelous stories concerning her.

The suit seeks damages for the use of Mrs. Smith's photograph and stories concerning her.

Mrs. Smith was convicted in the Circuit Court of Rockingham County, a., in 1945 for the murder of her husband, Frank, but later the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals reversed the decision, declaring that she should not be convicted on "supposition."

Wohlford Is Acquitted

Winchester, Va., Sept. 17.—Samuel Dwight Wohlford, of Winchester, was acquitted of drunken driving today by a jury in circuit court on an appeal from a lower court conviction. The jury deliberated less than an hour in finding the defendant not guilty.

Freedom Train Is Christened At Philadelphia, Reds Assailed

Philadelphia, Sept. 17 (AP).—Christening of the freedom train in this historic birthplace of American liberty today brought a strong attack on communism and a challenge that freedom must be worldwide if there is to be any at all.

United States Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.) said we can fight communism "and win without stooping to its tactics."

Attorney General Tom C. Clark, credited with fathering the idea of showing "U. S. A. everywhere" how liberty was won in 1776, insisted that "unless America shares its freedom with all nations, there will soon be no freedom for anyone in the broad reaches of the world."

Smashing his fist on the speaker's table, Clark told several thousand persons at dedication ceremonies "all of us must be free or none of us are free."

Some 30 pickets marched around the Pennsylvania Railroad's Broad Street Station. Placards urged Clark and President Truman to grant "amnesty for all war objectors" in the interest of freedom.

The shrine on wheels, carrying more than 100 priceless documents, is dedicated to carry its message of liberty East, North, West and South in a 33,000-mile, year-long pilgrimage across the Nation.

Elizabeth Wrecks Clothes Budget

Hollywood.—Elizabeth Taylor will be wearing cotton dresses until December this year.

The young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress went shopping to take advantage of end-of-the-season sales and found so many things she "just adores," that she spent her entire clothes allowance up through November! Even though she has zoomed to star rank with her latest picture "Cynthia," her parents see that she doesn't change her scale of living, and insist that she stick to her allowance.

Said Elizabeth: "I hope we have a warm fall!"

One on the Aisle—

An Even Smarter Girl

Deanna's Acting Is Catching Up

By Richard L. Coe

IF YOU LIKE Deanna Durbin and Donald O'Connor—as who doesn't?—you'll have a pleasant stretch at Keith's "Something in the Wind."

It's an unpretentious little picture, at its best in song numbers and when it tries to be screwy. But the two stars are the real fun.

For there is, after all, no one quite like Deanna. In the decade since "Three Smart Girls," she's had some fluffs, but generally she's held to a worthwhile average. In this one she runs a whole gamut of talents, tossing off farcical lines and a variety of songs.

Our favorite is one a la Mary Martin's "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," a little ditty of Johnny Green and Leo Robin, "You Wanna Keep Your Baby Looking Right." Deanna bursts this one out just before she joins Jan Peerce in the Miserere from "Il Trovatore," which gives you some idea of the Durban versatility.

Too, of all the screen's songbirds Deanna still records with the most velvety tones. Her voice retains that youthful though polished clarity that thrust her into stardom with "Three Smart Girls." In fact, one of the songs in this one, "It's Only Love," strongly suggests her first picture's "Someone to Care for Me."

Add to this her genuine prettiness and increasing skill in tossing off, almost throwing away, reasonably witty lines, and you have one of the screen's most likable stars. As you see, Deanna has us bewitched.

O'Connor's Comic Song

As for O'Connor, he's a right good performer, too. With his curiously aged face and late-teen exuberance, he also is a screen performer with a distinct, friendly personality. He's got an amusing song satirizing radio, "I Love a Mystery," and you'll find it good clean fun.

Radio has something to do with the story. Deanna plays a disc jockey with network ambitions. She's visited by the stuffy heir of a wealthy socialite, on whose death it is learned that he has been supporting a Mary Collins. The estate wants to settle with Miss Collins and assumes our Deanna is she. Deanna plays along with the idea and things ultimately wind up the way they always do.

That the story makes no sense is unimportant, even including the movies' regular habit of getting someone tossed in jail on no legal authority whatever, a point on which our town's legal legions will squirm. But, after all, it's only a movie, folks.

A Railroadin' Short

Also on deck is Charles Winninger (who, incidentally, played Deanna's father in "Three Smart Girls"), Charlie's a wastrel uncle of the society stuffed-shirt. Jan Peerce plays, of all things, a cop who conveniently likes to sing operatic arias while on duty in jail, and his well-known tenor makes the "Trovatore" duet good listening. Margaret Wycherly, dressed up for a change, is the playboy's ambitious mother, and John Dall is the sulky scion.

Keith's has a fine "This Is America" short. This one is "Whistle in the Night," a report on the Nation's railroads. Since the "March of Time" did one on the same subject not long ago, it's interesting to note that the less stentorian of "This Is America" has achieved a finer result. The script writing is of far better quality, really fine in some spots. It captures the endless fascination of railroadin'.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe reviews "Desert Fury," opening this morning at the Palace.

"SOMETHING IN THE WIND." Universal-International release produced by Joseph Sistrom. Screenplay by Harry Kurnitz and William Bowers from a story by Fritz Rotter and Charles O'Neal. Music by Johnny Green. Lyrics by Leo Robin. Directed by Irving Pichel. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

DeMille Must Like His 'Unconquered'

Hollywood.—A personal tour of 12 of the nation's key cities by Cecil B. DeMille is being planned as part of the company's campaign for "Unconquered," Technicolor film which is the producer-director's sixty-seventh production.

The visits will be timed with the premiere of the picture in the dozen cities. DeMille will be feted by local public officials and business and civic leaders in each city.

The tour will get under way immediately following the American premiere of the big-scale film which stars Gary Cooper and Paulette Goddard at Loew's Penn Theater in Pittsburgh on October 3.

DeMille's itinerary is now being set up.

Female Parts Still Lure That He-Dog

Hollywood.—Lassie, now listed as both a film and radio star, the first canine in history to hold such a distinction, will win new laurels by playing her first character role in his next picture, M-G-M's "Hills of Home."

In each of his three films to date, Lassie has been Lassie, but in his new film he becomes the collie dog of a Scotch doctor. This time, Lassie, whose real name is Pal, will be just plain Lass on the screen.

As usual, however, he'll be doing another female role.

Big Color Job

The biggest single job of red hair ever turned out by the famous Westmore clan of Hollywood was needed for "Life With Father." William Powell, Irene Dunne and four youngsters—and a dog, all appear in various shares of red hair.

1200 Walk Out At Harvester Tractor Plant

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 17 (AP).—Production of tractors was halted today at the International Harvester plant here when 1200 members of the CIO-United Farm Equipment Workers walked out in what the company called a strike over wages.

Charles A. Gibson, president of Local 236, of the CIO affiliate, said the stoppage is not a strike. He added that 60 days' notice is required for a strike under the Taft-Hartley law.

The employes said they would attend a "continuous meeting" at CIO hall until the company agrees to pay the same wage rates in Louisville that it pays in other plants outside Chicago.

Strike of 700 Ties Up Bellevue-Stratford

Philadelphia, Sept. 17 (AP).—Seven hundred CIO employes of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel went on strike today, leaving only 40 supervisory employes and a few maintenance men to operate the 18-story central city building.

Most of the 900 guests, including 150 permanent residents, still were in their rooms when the strike started. Guests carried their own bags as they arrived and checked out, and made their own beds if they were made. The dining room and bar were closed.

"The issue is whether management or the union is going to run the hotel," said Bennett E. Tousley, vice president and general manager. "It will be settled in this strike."

"The management is demanding the right to fire anybody it wishes without arbitration," said Anthony D'Elia, chief bellboy and president of Local 356, Hotel and Restaurant Union.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

President Rings Bell Oftener on His Own

By Drew Pearson

When Harry Truman gets away from "government by cronies" and acts on his own, he usually rings the bell. When he acts hastily "on the advice of cronies," he frequently gets his feet wet—and the Nation's, too. That is one deduction drawn from the present woes of White House radio adviser J. Leonard Reinsch.

Reinsch

Last spring, Reinsch, an applicant for a radio station in Cincinnati, Ohio, was turned down by the Federal Communications Commission. Shortly thereafter, FC Commissioner Ray Wakefield, Republican, who voted against Reinsch and his Cincinnati station, found himself out of a job. The White House had withdrawn Wakefield's name for reappointment.

In his place was appointed Congressman Robert Jones, not merely a Republican, but a strongly isolationist Republican, with a record of having voted against Roosevelt-Truman foreign policies both before and after Pearl Harbor.

Others besides Reinsch—notably ex-Speaker Sam Rayburn—had something to do with Jones' appointment. But Truman himself apparently realized little of what was going on, until able FC Chairman Charley Denny called at the White House sometime later.

Truman Wakes Up

In his hand, Denny carried Broadcasting Magazine, mouthpiece of the big radio networks, announcing that he, Denny, was resigning as FC chairman with White House radio adviser Reinsch taking his place.

"I'm not planning to resign, Mr. President," explained the puzzled FC chairman, "but I will if you want me to."

Truman protested that it was all news to him, told Denny he needed him on the FCC, had no intention of letting him resign. Never slow to catch a point, Truman figured that Reinsch had planted the resignation story, was pulling wires to get Denny out and himself into the FCC.

Result No. 1. J. Leonard Reinsch is very much in the presidential doghouse. Originally slated to accompany Truman to Rio de Janeiro, Reinsch's name was suddenly scratched from the list. The White House is now reported looking for a new radio adviser.

Result No. 2. Truman realizes he did an injustice to FC Commissioner Ray Wakefield by replacing him with Congressman Jones. Wakefield, a Republican who has made a conscientious career out of Government, was yanked off the FCC one day after Truman urged Princeton grads to make a career of Government. Conscience-stricken, Truman now plans to make Wakefield either a Federal judge in California or a member of the Federal Power Commission—probably the latter.

British Rationing

England is one country where the black market is kept at a minimum. And the higher up the Britisher, the more he leans over backward to obey rationing.

The other day in England, Charles Luckman, wonder boy of American business who heads the Lever Brothers soap properties in the U. S. A., was being entertained by Lord and Lady Leverhulme at their castle. His visit over, Luckman was packing his bags to leave for Boston when Lord Leverhulme came into his room.

In the open suitcase, his lordship noticed six cakes of Swan soap, made by the American branch of Lever Brothers. Luckman had brought the soap with him to England.

"Chuck," said Lord Leverhulme, half apologetically, "I suppose you won't be needing that soap when you go back to America."

"Not at all," said Luckman and, picking up the six cakes, he gave them to the head of the biggest soap company in the world.

Lord Leverhulme had been so careful to observe rationing that he refrained from slipping a few bars of soap into his pocket when he left his own factory.

Our No. 1 Enemy

It may sound hard to believe, but the huge shortage of this year's corn crop could be largely offset if the American people were able to eliminate one factor in their economy—rats.

Most people don't realize it, but one healthy rat eats or spoils around 100 pounds of grain per year. And while it's impossible to count the rat population, Interior Department experts estimate that rats are almost double the human population—probably totaling 250 million in the United States.

Entirely aside from the disease which rats spread from privy to pantry, and the havoc they wreak upon the waterfronts of American seaports, their effect upon the food supply of the United States is almost beyond realization. Between the time a farmer stores his corn in the fall and cleans out his cornerib in the summer, rats may have eaten the difference between profit and loss for the year. In addition, they spoil as much corn as they eat.

If the food destroyed by rats could be shipped overseas, this alone would about save Europe from its current danger of starvation.

At present one Government agency, the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Interior Department, is working on rat eradication. Handicapped by lack of funds, squeezed low by a penny-pinching Congress, Government rat eradicators are able to do little beyond circulating anti-rat propaganda.

During the war, the U. S. Army, working with Interior Department experts, developed a new rat poison—"1080"—so deadly it will wipe out the rat population of a farm overnight. However, it is also deadly to other animals, and for that reason has not been put into general use.

Government experts recommend red squill as the best rat poison; also gas pumped into rats' underground burrows. Rat traps are too slow for the prolific rodent, which reproduces about as fast as he can be trapped.

Note—The Library of Congress has now been purged of rats after a lady was frightened by one in the reading room last year. Officials feared that ravenous rodents might make a diet of historical documents and paintings. Search of the Government buildings found no rats in the White House, though a few infested the White House lawn. There were plenty in the halls of Congress.

Fleet Worker Drowns

Newport News, Va., Sept. 17 (AP). William C. West, 23, of Perrin, in Gloucester County, drowned yesterday when a cable struck him in the forehead and knocked him overboard near Fort Eustis. The body was recovered four hours after the accident. West was a fleet worker with the James River reserve fleet.

Planes at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 17.—Approximately 50 United States Navy planes were at the Municipal Airport here today after evacuation from the East coast area in the face of threatening high winds of hurricane proportions.

Two Express Bus Routes To Get Trial

Two Capital Transit express routes, to determine feasibility of extra fare service from Riverdale, Md., to downtown Washington, were approved yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The experimental routes, scheduled for Monday, will carry Riverdale commuters to and from Washington for a 30-cent rate each way on an express basis, compared with the current local stop rate of 15 cents. From Mount Rainier, Md., the "fast route fare will be 20 cents compared to the 10 cents for the slower rate.

Local service will be continued over the routes without any changes in fare pending the experimental runs.

Routes Already Established

The Commission approved the routes proposed for the express routes but it has no jurisdiction over the rates because the company has filed no application for fare changes within the District, a PUC spokesman said.

No public hearing was called because the experimental express buses will follow routes already established by Capital Transit.

Under the express schedules, buses, after leaving the Mount Rainier terminal, will pick up no more pasesngers and will make discharge stops only at main intersections.

Buses will leave Riverdale at 5-minute intervals, Monday through Friday, beginning at 7:12 a. m., and ending at 8:17 p. m. Return trips will be from 9th st. and Constitution ave. nw., at 4:40 p. m., and run on a 5-minute schedule until 5:45 p. m.

Other Changes Announced

One of the purposes of the express schedule is to attract passengers who now use automobiles, according to E. C. Giddings, vice president of Capital Transit. It is designed to help relieve downtown parking and traffic congestion, he added.

Two other changes in Capital Transit services also were announced yesterday.

With completion of construction work opposite Ritchie Stadium in College Park, Md., on Sunday, the line will extend Route G-6, its Hyattsville line, from Riverdale to the University of Maryland.

Beginning Monday, weekend and holiday operation of buses from 15th st. and Treasury pl. nw., to the Lincoln Memorial and Hains Point will be discontinued. The Hains Point buses, it was pointed out, were operated during the summer "vacation" period.

Guatemala Acts Against Subversion

Guatemala, Guatemala, Sept. 17 (AP).—Minister of Government Francisco Villagran said tonight the Guatemalan government had suspended 10 articles of the constitution because of subversive activities within and outside of the country and because Communists were planning to organize their party here. The articles include: Freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and search and seizure.

The minister said also that two army officers and a civilian had been arrested and were awaiting trial on charges of plotting to overthrow the government. He said the government had information that a group to which the three men belonged planned to assassinate President Juan Jose Arevalo sometime this month.

Rail Bankruptcy Inquiry to Begin

By International News Service

Senator Reed (R., Kans.) announced yesterday that a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee would begin a six-day investigation on September 30 of the administration of the railway bankruptcy law by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Reed is chairman of the subcommittee, which includes Senators Hawkes (R., N. J.) and Myers (D., Pa.).

Fairfax Acts Show Speed Of Its Growth

Action taken at yesterday's meeting of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors served to point out the rapidity of the county's expansion.

The board granted a rezoning request which may pave the way for what has been called the first planned complete city in this part of the country. It heard squabbles between land developers and a power company which must fill the increased demands. It received a request for a uniform building code to supervise construction. It postponed discussion with the School Board of a school building program.

The board rezoned to residential 113 acres of a 2300-acre tract 4 miles south of Annandale near the route of the Shirley Highway and owned by a firm headed by Edward R. Carr, president of the National Association of Home Builders. Carr outlined plans for a community of nearly 25,000 people.

Action on a request that the board file suit for an injunction against the Virginia Electric & Power Co. for allegedly violating the county zoning ordinance, was postponed.

The board heard, without taking action, requests from the Annandale Businessmen's Association that it establish a building code.

WHIDBEY ISLAND, Wash., Sept. 17.—Mr. Quarterback in Navy's football camp is Reaves H. Baysinger, jr., who was a very undistinguished fourth stringer at this point last season. The kid from Syracuse is now perhaps the most important person in the scheme of Navy football this year.

POVICH

Navy coaches wince when a heavy hand is laid on Baysinger in the practice scrimmages. A Baysinger limp is enough to panic 'em. There's no substitute for Baysinger on the 60-man squad. There are other quarterbacks but none to make the T-formation go like he does, none to throw a pass like he can, none with his cold approach to situations. It's scarcely to his discredit to say he knows it too.

The midshipmen never would admit that Arnold Tucker was the best quarterback on the field in the Army-Navy game last year. More famous, perhaps, but no better than Baysinger. Four guys had a crack at Navy's quarterback job last season before Baysinger came along to put 'em all in the shade to the admitted surprise of even the Navy coaches. He was something they uncovered half way through the season.

The next voice you hear will be that of a Navy coach talking about Baysinger:

"WE'RE LUCKY we didn't cut him off the squad early last fall. He didn't even seem interested. For a fourth-string quarterback his attitude didn't seem so hot. Baysinger didn't act like he particularly cared about making the team. In the skull drills he wasn't very intent and he had what looked like half a smirk as if it was old stuff to him. On the practice field no particular fire at all.

"We knew he could throw that ball pretty well but there were other kids with more enthusiasm. I guess we gave them the break. When Baysinger got in he did everything well but no fire. But we were mistaken. What we thought was a lack of spirit was simply the goldarndest most wonderful calm and poise a kid ever brought into a football game.

"He got his chance and he was ice cold out there. The kids call him the iceman. Our fumbling stopped almost as soon as he took over he handled that ball from center like an accomplished veteran. Our kids finally realized they had a good quarterback and coming up to the Army game we needed one. He was the best thing that happened to us all last year.

IN THE ARMY GAME Baysinger showed the Navy coaches a play that wasn't in their books. It was something he whipped up with Ken Schiwek, a guard who was in the Navy backfield on defense, one of three guards in the lineup at the time. After Navy recovered a fumble Baysinger called a play before the coaches could make a substitution. It was a forward pass to Guard Schiwek, who as a backfield man was eligible.

Navy coaches weren't at all concerned the other day when a couple of reserve quarterbacks, Bob Horne and Cal Killeen, outperformed Baysinger.

"He doesn't take these scrimmages too seriously," said Head Coach Tom Hamilton. "You have to know that about him. I'd be worried if I didn't."

He does the team's kicking. On defense he has never been replaced. On his passes he has the poise of a pro and throws like one. Last season he was a 175-pounder. He's a bigger man now at 185 and still growing. Navy thinks it has the best quarterback in the East.

NAVY'S FIRST TEAM had the tar whaled out of it the other day by the second club which scored three touchdowns in a two-hour scrimmage. But Head Coach Hamilton was philosophical enough. It proved one of his own pet theories: That the team with the most enthusiasm wins.

"It was a typical practice game," he said. "The Whites gave the Blues a bad time of it and I've seen it happen before. The second team always has that big incentive. They're out to win one of those blue jerseys. It's nice when you get your first team knocked off like that. It means they've got to hustle for their jobs."

Today was Alumni Day in the Navy football camp. Hamilton invited 50 visiting admirals, captains and assorted braid to watch the practice and mingle with the squad. Most of 'em were profusely decorated war heroes the Middies had heard about. Hamilton has a method in bringing Navy's big shots into camp.

"I want our kids to see some of our heroes and mix with 'em. I want to impress them with Navy's traditional spirit. Perhaps some of it will rub off on our boys.

Mulvey Has Western Team In Mood to Lick W.-L. High

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Dickie Lewis, Washington-Lee High's triple-threat fullback star, will be pleased to learn that yesterday afternoon at Western Stadium he pitched four touchdown passes.

He'll be surprised, too. Because at no time yesterday was he closer than 10 miles of Western. Instead he was practicing with his W.-L. mates in Arlington, as they prepare to help Western open its grid season at W.-L.

But in the backfield of the Western scrub team, and doing a good imitation of Lewis, as the Western regulars scrimmaged against W.-L. plays yesterday, was Billy Richardson, the former George Washington University standout. Richardson, now assistant grid coach to Fred Mulvey at Western, was hitting his receivers just like Lewis, who passed to two touchdowns for W.-L. against Fort Hill last week.

Despite his first team's poor showing against the W.L. plays, Mulvey seems confident that his Western team will make a good showing against the Arlington team, and go on to do well in the interhigh series.

W.-L. Always Tough

It's almost heresy these days to hear one of interhigh's coaches speak confidently of his team's chances against Washington-Lee, perenially a powerhouse, but Mulvey explains it this way:

"I saw W-L beat Fort Hill, 33-21 last week, and they looked good too. That Lewis boy is terrific. He makes that team 50 to 75 per cent stronger when he's in there. Even though W-L will outweigh us, and have an older average than Western, I figure that if we can stop Lewis, we've got a good chance to winning.

"And another thing. Even if we don't win that game, we will have gained from the experience. W-L is always tough, and should give us callouses for the Wilson, interhigh game next week. So unless we suffer injuries, which I don't expect, we can't lose."

The Western team that takes the field this season will bear a striking resemblance except in one important respect to the club that won three out of seven interhigh games last season. That one big difference is that it will have more experience.

Last year, Mulvey introduced the "T" formation to the school. This year, he has two experienced quarterbacks to set the pace for a well seasoned backfield. The regular quarter will be Don Strain, with veterans George Holmes and Jack Leadbetter at the halves, and Norman Wacker at full. Dale Summerhell, reserve quarterback last season, is back, and rookies Jim O'Leary and Wade Hubbard are showing well as backfield placements.

60,000 See Skins Trail Bears, 21-7

By Bill Burentt
Post Reporter

Chicago, Sept. 17. — Perfect weather attracted an estimated 60,000 fans to Soldier Field tonight as the Washington Redskins and the Chicago Bears tangled in a benefit exhibition for the combined armed forces relief fund.

Hundreds of sailors from Great Lakes, plus representatives of the Army, Marines and Air Forces, participated in pre-game ceremonies.

The Redskins trailed the Bears, 21-7, at halftime. Two passes from Sid Luckman to Ken Kavanaugh scored the first two Bear touchdowns.

Sammy Baugh, the Redskins' rifle, was on the bench and unlikely to see action. The ace who hasn't turned up uninjured in a Chicago game since 1937 was nursing an old rib injury and Coach Turk Edwards decided not to use him unless absolutely necessary.

The Redskins won the toss and elected to receive. Dick Todd took Allen's kick-off on the 9-yard line and ran it back to the Redskins' 31.

On their first series of plays the Redskins gained nothing. A try at the line was smeared and two passes by Jimmy Youel were wide. Youel's kick was partially blocked and the Bears took over on the Redskins 41.

Gaffney Fumbles

The Bears couldn't move, either, and Sid Luckman saved the champions some embarrassment when, trapped in punt formation, he got off a quick kick to the Redskin 18. Jim Gaffney's fumble then set up the game's first score.

Hugh Gallarneau pounced on the ball on the 19 and it took exactly one play for the Bears to score. Luckman tossed into the end zone to Kenny Kavanaugh, the latter jiggling the ball as he dashed along with Bob Defruiter on his trail. Ray McLean kicked the point that made it 7-0 for the Bears after four minutes of play.

Gaffney Fumbles Again

The Redskins were moving with the next kickoff when Gaffney committed his second fumble. Two first downs carried the Redskins to the Bear 18, Youell clicking on a 28-yard pass to Gaffney, and the latter ploying through the line for 6 yards for another first.

Preston picked up Gaffney's fumble on the 17 and again the Bears marched to a touchdown, a 12-yard Luckman to Sprinkle pass featured the drive and on the end was a 44-yard toss, again from Luckman to Kavanaugh, for the score. Kavanaugh took the pass on the 13 and went over and McLean kicked the point with two minutes of the first quarter left.

Bears Marching Again

As the second period got under way the Bears were starting a march on their own 45, traveling on three first downs to the Washington 13, where a Luckman pass to Kavanaugh, oddly enough, missed by inches.

Chicago continued to gain, however, as Youel was trapped back on the seven attempting to pass and two successive penalties for relaying the game, half the distance to the goal, pushed the Skins back to their one. Youel finally had to kick out from behind his own goal.

Bob Brownell Leads Way Into District Golf Quarterfinals

Shooting par golf for 29 holes, Bobby Brownell, Manor Country Club's pride, stepped two pegs nearer his second consecutive District Amateur Golf Association championship yesterday at Woodmont.

Staging a superb performance in the morning round, the defending champ ousted Medalist Jim Kinder of Prince Georges, 7 and 6. He found the going a bit tougher in the afternoon being carried 17 holes before Ray Swearingen of Columbia capitulated, 2 and 1.

The first and second rounds, while producing some outstanding golf, ran according to form with all the favorites coming through.

The tourney's other two former champions kept pace with Brownell.

Billy Shea of Congressional licked youthful Jay Wolf of Indian Spring, 3 and 2, in the morning, and then eliminated Charlie Price of Kenwood, 6 and 5, in the afternoon.

Ralph Bogart, wartime titleholder, clipped Cabot Feldman of Woodmont, 2 up, and then beat Dick Burgess of Argyle, 5 and 4.

But it was Brownell's sparkling play that stole the show.

The Maryland and Middle-Atlantic king started stron against Kinder. He opened up a five hole gap on the first nine, covering the distance in 33, two under par. He was par over the first three incoming holes, with 12 more strokes, eliminating Kinder.

Brownell's play in the afternoon was steady as he clicked off a two over par 65 for the 17 holes before Swearingen bowed out.

Brownell drew as his quarterfinals foe this morning Howard Nordlinger of the host club. Nordlinger's record yesterday consisted of 3 and 2 victories over Walter Cessna of Belle Haven and Martin McCarthy of Columbia.

The semifinals will take place this afternoon, with the 36 hole final round slated for tomorrow.

FIRST ROUND—Bobby Brownell (Manor) defeated Lieut. Jim Kinder (Prince Georges), 7 and 6; Ray Swearingen(Columbia) defeated Bill Summers (Indian Spring), 5 and 2; Howard Nordlinger (Woodmont) defeated Walter Cessna (Bell Haven), 3 and 2.

SECOND ROUND—Brownell defeated Swearingen, 2 and 1; Nordlinger defeated McCarthy, 3 and 2; Bogart defeated Burgess, 3 and 4; Kenrick defeated Miller, 3 and 2; Shea defeated Price, 6 and 5; Smith defeated Rehkopf, 7 and 6; Bowers defeated Skinker, 1 up; Nee Defeated Wilson, 1 up on 19 holes.

Terp Line Coach On Injured List

Now it's a coach added to the injury list in the University of Maryland football camp.

Trainer Duke Wyre said yesterday that John Cudmore, assistant line coach, came up with a pulled tendon during practice and would be out for two weeks.

Who's Hursey? Bell Asks in Workout Here

Some 200 fight fans came away from the Liberty Athletic Club yesterday with the firm conviction that Smuggy Hursey had bitten off quite a chunk for his Monday night fight at Griffith Stadium.

They had just seen Smuggy's new opponent, Tommy Bell, 5 feet 10½ inches of greased lightning, open up against local boys Al Wright and Flat Top Cummings in two-round workouts.

Tommy, who floored Ray Robinson for an eight count in the second round of their world welterweight championship bout in Madison Square Garden last December 20, made good use of the left hook he used to advantage against Robinson, staggering both Wright and Cummings with some solid shots.

"I don't know anything about Hursey, and I've never seen him fight, but he isn't worrying me any," Bell grinned as he ducked into a shower after the workout. "I take them all as they come, welterweights and middleweights alike, and don't ask any questions."

Tommy is from Youngstown, Ohio, and has been established as an early 8-5 favorite.

Bell will continue to work out at the Liberty Club daily through Saturday, while Hursey concludes training in Billy Grubb's Harlem gymnasium Friday, and will report here for a final public drill Saturday.

Sinkwich Out For Season, May Never Play Again

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Frankie Sinkwich will play no more football this season and the former All-America back at Georgia may be through with the game forever.

Sinkwich, named the National Football League's most valuable player in 1944 while with Detroit, suffered a left knee cartilage injury while he was in the service. The 25-year-old Youngstown, Ohio, back underwent an operation before the 1946 season and was used sparingly last year.

After the league opener at Buffalo, his knee became swollen and he suffered considerable pain. He played in the next two games and then asked to be dropped from the roster.

Wooten Saves 2 Runs but Nats Still Lose, 7-0

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Had it not been for a miraculous catch by Earl Wooten, Cleveland would have thumped the Nats, 9-0, last night instead of 7-0.

The rookie outfielder ran into and then crashed over the temporary center field fence to rob Ken Keltner of a two-run homer in the second inning. Les Fleming, who had walked, was on first when Wooten made his super-sensational play and was allowed to move to second as the ball was caught out of thet playing field.

This feat took the heat off Ray Scarborough for the moment, but his doom was sealed four innings later when the Indians employed a bit of wise strategy. They hit the ball beyond the reach of the Nat outfielders, treating themselves to a five-run excursion, four more runs than were necessary to win the game.

Ray Loses His Thirteenth

Scarborough retired after that inning, carrying with him his thirteenth defeat of the year, the last eight of which have come one after another.

The Nats, of course, treated Scarborough to his usual diet of no runs. They have scored exactly no runs for him in the last 33 innings, and only three in theft last 59.

While the Indians were cuffing Scarborough and his immediate successor for eight hits and all their runs, Big Allen Gettel was having a gay time with the Nats, restricting 'em to six safeties.

The only Washingtonian to disturb him was Gil Coan, making his first start since his recall from Chattanooga. Coan got three of the six hits, including a wasted triple in the fourth. He was one of the two Nats to reach that advanced outpost.

Sherry Robertson saw third, briefly, in the fifth, arriving there by virtue of his double and a sacrifice. But there he remained as neither Johnny Sullivan nor Eddie Yost could get the ball out of the infield.

It was quite a ball game for five innings and the 3829 fans liked it tremendously. They saw some great fielding by Wooten, Scarborough, Ken Keltner and Yost, but no runs.

First in Line Cardinal Rooter For Series Is

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—A St. Louis Cardinal fan who refuses to concede the National League pennant to the Brooklyn Dodgers today became the first person in line for the opening game of the world series—at least 13 days ahead of time.

Joseph H. Prine, 57-year-old retired Army sergeant from 706 N. Kings highway St. Louis, arrived by bus last night and at 10 a. m. today he took up his position at the bleacher entrance to Yankee Stadium.

News photographers had hardly finished taking pictures of the early arrival when Police Sergt. Andrew Connolly approached and told Prine he would not be permitted to start a line at the stadium this far in advance.

But the officer promised Prine that if he would return on the eve of the series opener he would see that the fan got his No. 1 position.

Prine thanked the sergeant, picked up his suitcase and went off in search of lodgings.

Mrs. Kintz Wins At Prince Georges

Ladies' Day at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club yesterday saw Mrs. Barton Kintz capture the low gross prize with a score of 87. Low net honors went to Mrs. Joseph Balestro, who carded 111—36—75.

Runners up in the low net division were Mrs. James Kinder, 95—17—78, and Mrs. John Ramey, 102—21—81.

Dizzy Dean Forsakes Safety of Radio Booth To Make Pitching Comeback With Browns

St. Louis, Sept. 17 (AP).—Trying to brighten the waning days of the American League season for their cash customers, the St. Louis Browns today signed Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean to a player contract, the duration of which the former pitching great of the St. Louis Cardinals wisecracked "depends on the other team."

Brownie Publicity Man Ed Smith, who announced the signing, said the burly, graying right-hander would probably start one or more of the team's remaining home games at the discretion of Manager "Muddy" Ruel.

The Browns returned home Tuesday to wind up their 1947 season.

Dean, a great drawing card even now might be used twice—on Tuesday night and Sunday and he would almost certainly build up the Browns' miserable home attendance.

Here is how the unexpected came about.

Diz, who broadcasts the Brownies' games with Mike-mate Johnny O'Hara, had complained throughout the dismal season about the poor quality of the team's pitching.

He groaned regularly about the hapless pitchers' inability to get the ball over the plate. "You know, Johnny," he would often say, I'd give anything to fog 'em in there again.

A couple of weeks ago Dean and O'Hara discussed the possibility of the former fireballer chucking a few innings for the Browns on the last day of the season. They decided to leave it up to their audience.

The fans were not slow in responding. Smith said the ball club received "three or four thousand" letters requesting that Dean be allowed to pitch.

Diz signed his contract today, grinned, and said he was pleased with the terms.

"One thing you can be sure of," he added, "I won't walk nobody."

Diz said he intended to bank on a fast ball and curve, avoiding freak deliveries.

"I know I can throw harder than some of them American League pitchers I've seen this year, and I won't throw no bloopers."

"I want them Brownie infielders to play deep," he went on, "'cause I don't want to send some of them boys home crippled right at the end of the season." He will be 37 next January.

Giants Trade Wild Games With Cubs

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants traded wild ball games here today with Johnny Mize belting his forty-eighth and forty-ninth home runs to tie Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner for the Major League lead.

The Giants won the first game, 9-3, and pulled a six-run ninth-inning rally in the second game to tie things at 10-10, only to lose out on Bill Nicholson's two-run homer, 12-10.

Mize walloped his first homer of the day and forty-eighth of the season and Walker Cooper his thirty-fourth to lead the Giants to victory in the opener.

Big John got his second of the day and forty-ninth of the year, a line drive into the left center field bleachers, in the second inning of the nightcap to put the Giants into a 1-1 tie with the Cubs.

The Giants again broke out their homerun bats in the seventh in an attempt to get back in the ball game when Outfielder Willard Marshall hit a round-tripper with two men on.

Cobb Thinks He Can Top Own Record

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 17 (AP).—"I felt I was riding inside an infuriated vibration machine."

That was the comment of John Cobb of London today after he exceeded the long-dreamed-of 400 miles per hour in an automobile.

In setting new world records for the measured mile and the kilometer the Englishman hit 415 m.p.h. for part of one lap, he said his instruments showed.

"It made me feel like a king for a minute to go over 400 miles an hour," he told a reporter.

At 415 m.p.h. he was streaking almost seven miles a minute. (Remember when a-mile-a-minute was breakneck speed in a car?)

The Railton Mobile special he drove weighs 7,700 pounds, but at the velocities he attained "hanging on" becomes almost as important as driving, he observed.

Objects 200 yards distant were blurs. Acceleration was so rapid that he felt, he said, a definite pressure against his body.

On his runs late yesterday, the effect of wind was sharply etched by the electronic timing devices. Driving southward on the 14-mile salt course he faced a slight wind and his run in that direction, usually the faster, was about 18 miles an hour slower than his northward sprint.

After one of his test runs, Cobb said a crosswind made it difficult to keep the huge car on a black guide line.

Cobb's fastest land speed compared with a record of 406.9 miles an hour made in a seaplane, according to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, by an English pilot named Stainforth on September 19, 1931. The previous record in a plane was 357.7, set in 1929. Those flying marks, of course, have been far exceeded now.

Sir Malcolm Campbell holds the world motorboat speed record of 141.74 m.p.h., set with his Bluebird 2d on Lake Coniston in England August 19, 1939.

Cobb feels his car "hasn't reached its limit yet." "It could do better if the course was smoother," he said.

Once, on the phenomenal northward run, he had to depress the clutch because of a rough spot on the course, he related.

Garvin's Girls Ousted, 16-1

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 17.—The Garvin's Grill girls' team of Washington, D. C., tonight was eliminated from the world softball championships, taking a 16-to-1 drubbing from the Fresno, Calif., Rockets.

Garvin's, with a slightly revamped line-up, never was in the ball game as the Fresno girls stepped out with five runs in the first inning.

From then on it was a rather pitiful contest with Fresno hitting and scoring at will and aided by 11 miscues afield by Garvin's. It was their second defeat in three contests.

Washington's unbeaten men's team, Kavakos Grill, plays the defending champion Fort Wayne Zollners at 6:45 tomorrow night.

Plenty of Tickets For Everything But Series Left

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—If you haven't ordered your ticket for the 1947 World Series, don't bother. There aren't any left.

The bad news came late today from General Manager John Collins of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who announced that his overworked staff would not accept any more applications after midnight tonight.

"We already are oversubscribed," he said wearily. "We have so much more than we can handle right now, I can't even hazard a guess as to the figures."

The Dodgers began accepting World Series applications last Monday, with a limit of two tickets a game to each customer.

The Yankees have long since sold out. A total of 21,000 tickets will be put on sale by the Yankees on the day of each game. Of these, 14,000 will be bleacher seats while 7000 will be for standing room only.

Reynolds Wins 18th For Yankees, 5-0

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Allie Reynolds, the ace righthander of the New York Yankees, recaptured the rank as the team's leading strikeout pitcher today by fanning nine batters in pitching a 5-0 shutout victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Reynolds, who chalked up his eighteenth victory against only seven losses, now has 122 strikeouts, compared with 114 for relief pitcher Lefty Joe Page.

It was Reynolds' fourth shutout success of 1947. For the Yanks, as a team, it was their twenfth whitewash win, compared with six lost. The win raised the stock of Reynolds in the bid to hurl the opening World Series game for the Yankees.

Reynolds allowed seven hits. The Yanks made the same number, but bunched them better. They scored a run in the first inning, and four in the third on hour hits off starter Thornton Lee.

DobsonHurls 1-Hitter At Browns in Second

Boston, Sept. 17 (AP).—Joe Dobson allowed only one hit—a broken bat single to right field by Wally Judnich—as the Boston Red Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 4-0, today in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Browns took the opener, 9-4, behind Bob Muncrief.

Ted Williams hit his thirtieth home and drove in three runs in the opener.

The split moved the Bosox back into second place in the American League over the Detroit Tigers who were losing two.

Cincinnati, Sept. 17 (AP).—For the second successive time in five days, lefty Johnny Vander Meer flashed his old pitching form today, shutting out the Philadelphia Blue Jays with four hits and leading Cincinnati to a 12-to-0 win.

Last Saturday Vandy beat the New York Giants on four hits. Today's victory was his ninth of the season.

Hoyas, Terps In Scrimmage

Jim Tatum and Jack Hagerty took the wraps off their 1947 football machines for keeps yesterday at College Park, as Maryland and Georgetown bulled each other around for two hours in the second scrimmage game of the year between the two schools.

With his entire squad on hand, Tatum attuned somewhat for the pushing around Maryland suffered last Saturday and the Terrapins with two sturdy lines operating in front of a band of clever backs took home what there was of balony. N oscore was released.

Lou Gambino and Hubie Werner, halfbacks on Maryland's first team, were in a bracket by themselves when yardage gain was computed. The 200-pound Gambino ran over through and around the Hoyas for regular lengthy gains, and Werner consistently popped through split second openings in the line to contribute generously to the Terps total.

Georgetown's line, always displaying Mush Dubofsky's handicraft, flashed spasmodic brilliance in offering protection to Quarterback Elmer Raba and Jack Tamney, whose sharp aerials were the mainstays of the Hoya defense.

Happy and I 'Great Friends,' Says MacPhail

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Larry MacPhail, president of the New York Yankees, today denied that there was any rift between himself and Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, and took occasion to point out that everything was chummy in his relations with the baseball commissioner.

"Mr. Chandler never gagged me, and never fined me," said Larry. "I consider him a personal friend, and I think he feels the same way about me.

"That does not mean that I have always agreed with him, or that as a baseball official and head of the league policy commission, I have not expressed my opinion on various matters, but I feel that Commissioner Chandler has always respected me personally.

"I make this statement to squelch certain unjust reports that have been circulated that I have been gunning for Happy Chandler. I have always had the greatest respect for the office of the commissioner of baseball and will continue in that attitude."

Baltimore Stadium Hits Snag Again

Baltimore, Sept. 17 (AP).—Construction of Baltimore's new sports arena on the present site of the 33d st. Municipal Stadium today faced threat of a court fight.

Immediately after Mayor D'Alesandro's stadium committee yesterday unanimously recommended rebuilding on the stame site, Harry Y. Wright, president of the stadium neighborhood protect committee, announced:

"There definitely will be a court action against the use of park property at that location for commercialized sports."

Wright said filing of the suit, probably an injunction request, is up to the group's lawyers.

Bugler Captures Feature at Marlboro as Favorites Fail

AT MARLBORO

Dear Folks:

Apprentice Jockey Ernie Wood, who broke his arm at Pimlico in 1946, has had a lot of trouble with the injury. However, he is almost shipshape now and while visiting here said he hopes to get back in the saddle action next spring. He is from Deale, Md. Irish Boyle, custodian of the jockey rooms at some Maryland tracks, died yesterday in Louisville, Ky. Eddie Hopkins, in one of Tuesday's spills here, was only shaken up and should resume riding late this week. Ben Brady, however, will be out for a month at least as the result of a deep gash in his left foot. X-rays revealed no break. The Thursday program includes three distance races. For the first time the routers will have their innings on the featured spot—The Clinton Purse, a test of a mile and a sixteenth. Only six horses will vie for the $1200 purse but they promise plenty of action. See you on the rail. . . . BILL.

Pat Grant Boots Home $7 Winner

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 17.—The favorite players went down swinging in the featured Villa Maria Purse today. The Cedar Hill Stable's Bugler, paying a $7 mutuel, showed little respect for the form faithful and scampered home ahead of S. J. Corral's Love My Gal, the odds-on choice in a field of eight.

With Jockey Patsy Grant aboard, Bugler won his fourth race of the year in seven tries and made it three wins out of four outings. The 7-year-old led every jump of the way and was clocked at 1:08 for the 5½ furlongs over a fast track.

Bugler jumped to the front of the pack at the first tingle of the starting bell. With the number 1 post position he already was on the inside and he stayed there. Bit of Nerve tried to race with Bugler early and weakened as the result of hard usage. Then Love My Gal rallied and moved up boldly. However, in the final drive Bugler staved off the favorite.

Double Pays $121.60

The daily double paid $121.60. Apprentice J. Snyder brought A. E. Mitchell's Park Scandal to the front and a $10.80 victory in the first race while Jockey F. McGowan kicked Mrs. Esther Warren's Prison Ship home in the second race at $15.80.

Jockey Johnny Tammaro rode two winners for the day. In the fourth race he brought E. N. Kratz's Flying Wise from off the pace to win going away from W. M. Richardson's Electric, the favorite in the field of eight. R. L. Livingston's Petes Gold was third. Flying Wise paid $7.

The Baltimore boy came back with P. Augustine's Chance Oak in the fifth race and won in the tightest kind of photo with F. Pence's Baylette second. Third money went to Mrs. J. L. Furr's Don Orlan. In this race Tammaro again whipped a favorite in Baylette. Chance Oak, winner of two races here, paid $11.60.

6 New Faces To Be Seen in Md. Assembly

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—Six new faces will be seen in legislative halls when the General Assembly convenes in special session this fall, mostly because of political promotions.

Five new members will take seats in the House of Delegates when Governor Lane summons the session to deal with Baltimore City's financial problems. No date has been set.

One member, who is to replace John E. Clark (D., Harford), has not yet been named. Clark resigned from the House to become chairman of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission and the Board of Natural Resources.

In the Baltimore City delegation, C. Lyman Schuler will replace Anthony F. DiDomenico in the Second District and Hugh A. Kennedy will succeed John H. Reed in the Fifth. DiDomenico and Reed, Democrats, were elected to the City Council.

W. Albert Menchine of Baltimore County will succeed Johnson Bowie, another Democrat, in the House. Bowie was appointed trial magistrate by Governor Lane. In the Dorchester County delegation, Democrat Alan Webb succeeds Charles Edmondson, who was appointed State's attorney.

The only change in the Senate will be the seating of Wallace M. White, Salisbury publisher, to replace William H. Travers of Wicomico County, another Democrat. Travers was appointed to the State Tax Commission by the Governor.

Trinidad Boys' Club Studies Bid to Join Police Boys' Club

The Trinidad Boys' Club, whose application for membership in the Community Chest was received too late for approval, has been invited to become a unit of the Metropolitan Boys' Club.

The executive committee of the Trinidad Boys' Club, headed by Lieut. William T. Murphy, director of the juvenile bureau of the police department, will meet at 8:30 p. m. tonight to consider the matter.

In a letter to Murphy, John A. Remon, president of the Police Boys' Club executive committee, said "We have watched your organization in its growth with a great deal of interest and would like to have you represent us as a unit in your area."

Remon said that the budget and general expenses of the Trinidad Boys' Club would be assumed by his organization, and that it would have "ample representation" on the board of directors of all clubs within the Police Boys' Club.

He also pledged full support on the advancement of the Trinidad Boys' Club activities.

Fred Nalley, jr., founder and executive director of the boys' organization, admitted he was surprised by the Police Boys' Club offer, but said that "if it's going to benefit the club it's all right with me."

Nalley, the only paid worker of the club, would go on the payroll of the police club if his group decided to affiliate. He has no voice in the decision. "Whatever the executive committee decides," he said, "I'll go along with."

Congressman Says Cafe Man Sold Him Decomposed Chicken

A court summons yesterday was issued for Christ Catsohanis, proprietor of the Legion Cafe, 119 B st. se., where Representatibe Harold Youngblood (R., Mich.) claims he was sold a sandwich containing decomposed chicken.

The summons, issued by Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Chalfonte, orders Cotsohanis to appear in court tomorrow to answer charges of violation of District health laws.

Youngblood said he had purchased the sandwich for his daughter Nancy, 9. Mrs. Youngblood took the first bite and became ill immediately, the Congressman said.

Youngblood brought the remains of the food to the District Health Department, where, according to Inspector W. W. Burdett, it was found to be decomposed.

The Congressman is a member of the House District Subcommittee on Health and Education.

Twins Celebrate 90th Birthday

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—A set of identical twins from this city and Lancaster, Pa., celebrated their ninetieth birhtday today as friends quipped that the first 180 years are the hardest.

Thomas Barnett Davis of Hagerstown joined his brother, James Henry Davis, at Harrisburg and together they journeyed to Sewickley, Pa., for festivities at the home of a grand-niece.

The two oldsters are second youngest in a family of seven children, of whom they are the only survivors. Thomas, a former conductor on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, has been retired for the past 25 years. John, a widower, is also a retired railroad man.

Attorney Jailed On Check Charge Loses Paintings

A collection of paintings by Gustave Dore, which Attorney John M. Holzworth arranged to purchase last week for $12,500, will go on sale all over again in New York, it was announced yesterday.

In the meantime, Holzworth, unable to raise $1000 bond on bad check charges, is currently lodged in District Jail awaiting further appearance before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage tomorrow.

Holzworth was arrested last week outside District Court where he had unsuccessfully sought release of a convicted murdered in habeas corpus proceedings.

He was held in $1000 bond by Turnage following complaint of a Washington hotel that he had passed a worthless check. This charge followed a similar one lodged against him in New York City. He had been freed on $100 bond in the New York case.

School Board Candidtes Plan Inspection Tour

To gather their own "facts" on Arlington's often-criticized school system, five School Board candidates will make an inspection tour of the County's 31 schools this Saturday.

The trip was planned without notice to school authorities and when no classes are in session. Members will not enter the schools visited.

The quintet, picked by Arlington's School Board Nominating Conference last month, already have cited overcrowded schools, poor facilities and the lack of teacher security as serious defects in the system.

The touring candidates are Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, O. Glenn Stahl, Bernard Joy, Curtis E. Tuthill and Colin C. MacPherson. They will be opposed at the November 4 polls by a five-man slate backed by the Greater Arlington Association, which has in the past indorsed the present school administration.

STOCKHOLDERS IN OTHER BUSINESS HAVE A STAKE ALSO IN RAILROADS

Stockholders of all kinds of business should be interested in fair treatment for railroad stockholders.

Freight rates are too low to meet the mounting costs of railroad operation and allow railroad stockholders a fair return on their investments. If railroad stockholders are squeezed out—railroad operation would fall on the Government. Under Government operation, taxes to support the railroads would fall principally upon other corporations—owned, in turn, by their stockholders.

In other words, stockholders everywhere would be penalized.

Railroads should be treated equitably and given increased freight rates to meet increased costs and allow railroad stockholders a fair return.

The cost of materials and supplies necessary to railroad operation has increased 87% since 1939; wages and wage taxes are up about 70%. Freight rate increases have produced only 15% additional revenue for hauling the average ton of freight one mile. An increase in freight rates is needed. In the interest of everyone—employes included—freight rates should be adjusted promptly to the higher costs of performing transportation.

What the railroads desire is just and reasonable rates, that in meeting their responsibility to the public in furnishing adequate and efficient transportation service at the lowest cost consistent, they be allowed to earn sufficient revenues to enable the railroads, under honest and economical and efficient management, to provide the public with the service it desires.

Competitor Assails Pan Am Attitude

Braniff Charges Equal Rights Denied His Company at Latin America Fields

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Pan American Airways was charged yesterday with denying competitors equal rights at Latin American airports said to have been built at United States Government expense.

Rickenbacher

T. E. Braniff, president of Braniff Airways, made the charge before President Truman's air policy commission and asked the group to investigate the situation.

Braniff said that Pan American was paid a heavy air mail subsidy during the early days of its operation in Mexico and Central America J2 a mile compared to Braniff's 19¾ cents domestic rate—and that the former was justified on the ground Pan Am had to build airports and navigational facilities.

Now, he said, the "lack of willingness" of Pan American and its subsidy, Panagra, to make these facilities available to other United States carriers is hampering the development of American air services. Braniff said his own company's plans for operations to Mexico and Colombia have been stalled by failure to acquire landing rights.

Earlier, other United States airline chiefs presented their views on what's wrong with American aviation today. Few of them were in agreement in their recommendations before the Finletter Commission.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Airlines, took sharp issue with current policies of the Civil Aeronautics Board. He declared that the CAB is putting a "premium on inefficiency" in subsidizing and granting additional routes to "weak" airlines.

Airlines showing operating losses are given preference, said the World War I ace, by receiving higher airmail rates and extensions of route to strengthen them. The new routes granted weaken more efficient competitors already operating on these routes, he said.

Some of Eastern's competitors get up to 45 cents per plane mile in mail subsidies, compared to his company's average of three cents per plane mile, Rickenbacker said.

Rickenbacker Takes Travelers Aid Post

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker has accepted the post of airlines chairman for the National Travelers Aid Association, is was announced yesterday.

"The appointment is indicative of the increasing services being given by Travelers Aid to air passengers in many parts of the country," said Albert W. Atwood, president of the Washington Travelers Aid Society.

Nearly five million travelers by air, bus or rail were served by the 110 societies within the association last year. In Washington the society is a Community Chest agency and offers services in the National Airport, the Union Station and Greyhound Bus Station.

Md. Man Admits Illinois Slying

Decatur, Ill., Sept. 17.—Robert Earl Moore, 20, of Edgewood, Md., yesterday pleaded guilty to charges of murdering James J. Casey, Decatur cab driver, in June.

Circuit Judge Martin E. Morthland set Friday for a hearing to determine Moore's punishment.

A psychiatric report from Dr. William H. Haines of the Cook County Behavior Clinic declared that Moore, although a "psychopathic personality" was "not insane." The report indicated that Moore hired Casey's cab to drive to a spot outside Decatur, where the driver was robbed and shot. His body was found the next day.

Quito, Ecuador, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Carlos Julio Arosemena, 53, was sworn in today as acting President of Eduador before a joint session of Congress.

The country's fourth president in less than four weeks, Arosemena was elected yesterday by a special session of Congress to fill the unpired term of President Jose Maria Valsco Ibarra, overthrown August 23. His term will end September 1, 1948.

CAB Blames Locked Controls for N. Y. Crash Killing 43

Locked controls were cited by the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday as the probable cause of the crash of a United Airlines plane which killed 43 persons at New York last May 29.

The Board reported that "the probable cause of the accident was the inability of the pilot to actuate the controls due to the gust lock being on."

This resulted in a decision by the pilot, Benton Baldwin, 38, to try to stop the four-engined DC-4 "at a point too far down the runway" at LaGuardia Field, the Board said.

The craft could not be halted. It crashed through a fence and burned. Of the 48 aboard, 43 died. Four others were seriously hurt, and only Baldwin escaped with minor injuries.

The board found no evidence of mechanical failure, and said, while the craft was loaded beyond legal limits for the length of the runway, it "should have taken off without difficulty, provided that the airplane was functioning normally."

The Board said it was Baldwin's recollection that the Gust lock—a device which freezes all the controls in a neutral position—had been released, but it added that "recollections of that character are vy their very nature frequently treacherous."

"The common story of mislaid articles is sufficiently eloquent to remind that many honest and well-intentioned people remember having done things that they never did," it said.

The crash was one of three involving DC-4's, which in two weeks time took 146 lives. The others were accidents involving an Eastern Airlines plane near Port Deposit, Md., killing 53, and a Capital Airlines craft near Leesburg, Va., killing 50.

WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1947

Suburban Md. Board Will Hold Line on Rent

No Decontrol Due, Says Prince Georges, Montgomery Chief

Rents in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties will not be decontrolled in the near future, and "hold the line" policy on present levels will be followed generally.

That was the declaration yesterday of Chairman Harry A. L. Parker, of the recently appointed rent-control advisory board, which has jurisdiction over the two areas. Apparent agreement existed among the other four members of the board, recommended by Maryland's Governor Lane and appointed by Federal Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon. The board held its second meeting yesterday.

The board made news recently when it was revealed that none of the six members are tenants. Following the disclosure, Creedon wrote to Governor Lane advising that the board membership did not appear adequately "representative." He asked the Governor to name additional members to bring the board into balance.

Since appointment of the board, one of the members, Rhees E. Burket, has resigned. He is president of the Montgomery County Civic Federation. Other board members are Kent R. Mullikin of Laurel, a mortgage company executive; Frank L. Hewitt, jr., a Silver Spring real estate man; S. Walter Bogley, president of the Bank of Bethesda, and Emanuel F. Zalesak, a restaurant owner of College Park.

In declaring he favored retention of rent control and a "hold the line" policy on present rent levels, Parker emphasized adjustments should be made on an individual basis.

"Our policy," he said, "should be one of justice, fairness and equity to both landlord and tenant."

Bogley and Zalesak did not commit themselves. Hewitt and Mulcia said they favored continuation of rent controls. During the meeting, held in the rent control office, 8634 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, board members expressed some doubt there would be sufficient time for a survey wide enough to make a blanket recommendation for both counties. Unless the rent control act is continued beyond its present life of February 29, 1948, the local advisory board will go out of existence, it was pointed out.

Thomas E. Barrett, attorney for the area rent control director in Baltimore, observed at the meeting that the board is "very powerful." He pointed out that local board recommendations, if "appropriately substantial," must be carried out within 30 days.

Ex-Jockey Workman Wins 7% Rent Boost

The District Rent Control Administration yesterday granted a former jockey, Raymond (Sonny) Workman, 7 per cent rent increases for 58 units of an apartment house he owns at 2407 15th st. nw.

Apartments now renting for $2.50 will go up to $56 per month; those costing $77.50, to $83 a month.

Workman had asked for average increases of slightly less than 10 per cent. The boost granted will give him an added annual income of about $3324, as compared to the $4628 he requested, Examiner James G. Tyson estimated.

Workman maintained the increase was necessary to cover higher maintenance and operating costs and increased taxes and water rent.

Tenants have 10 days in which to appeal for reconsideration by Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

500 Register With Legion For Housing

The majority were members of recognized veterans organizations, about half being Legionnaires, according to Sylvan King, chairman of the Legion's housing committee.

At least 50 men were waiting at the door of Legion headquarters, 2437 15th st. nw., when the new service went into operation at 9 a. m., he said.

Washington building and real estate iindustries have agreed to give the Legiion 72-hour priority notice on 50 per cent of the housing available here for rent or purchase. Any veteran may register.

Led by the Washington Real Estate Board, the Home Builders Association and the Building Owners and Managers Association, many individual realtors yesterday asked to be included in the agreement, King said.

He said approximately 15 vacancies, expected shortly in apartments ranging in rent from $40 to $70 a month, were listed at the office yesterday. He said a number of veterans were notified immediately, but that he did not know if any of them had come to an agreement with the rental agents.

Starting today, two more women will join the two, who worked yesterday, in sorting out a list of now under construction or planned, so the registered veterans can be notified of them as soon as possible, according to King. The list was turned over to the Legion Tuesday.

A new telephone exchange—AD. 7059—has been installed to handle inquiries, he said.

Woman Is Fined For Assault After Firing 2 Shots

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—Two rifle shots fired during a husband-wife-third woman wrangle at Marley Park cost Miss Marjorie Digelman a $750 fine in Anne Arundel County Court today.

Miss Digelman testified she fired twice in the air "for devilment." Judge William J. McWilliams disagreed and convicted her of what he described as "flagrant assault."

The 30-year-old woman was charged with assault after Mrs. Herbert Rae reported she broke in the glass door of her Marley Park home and threatened to shoot both Mrs. Rae and her husband early in the morning of last July 4.

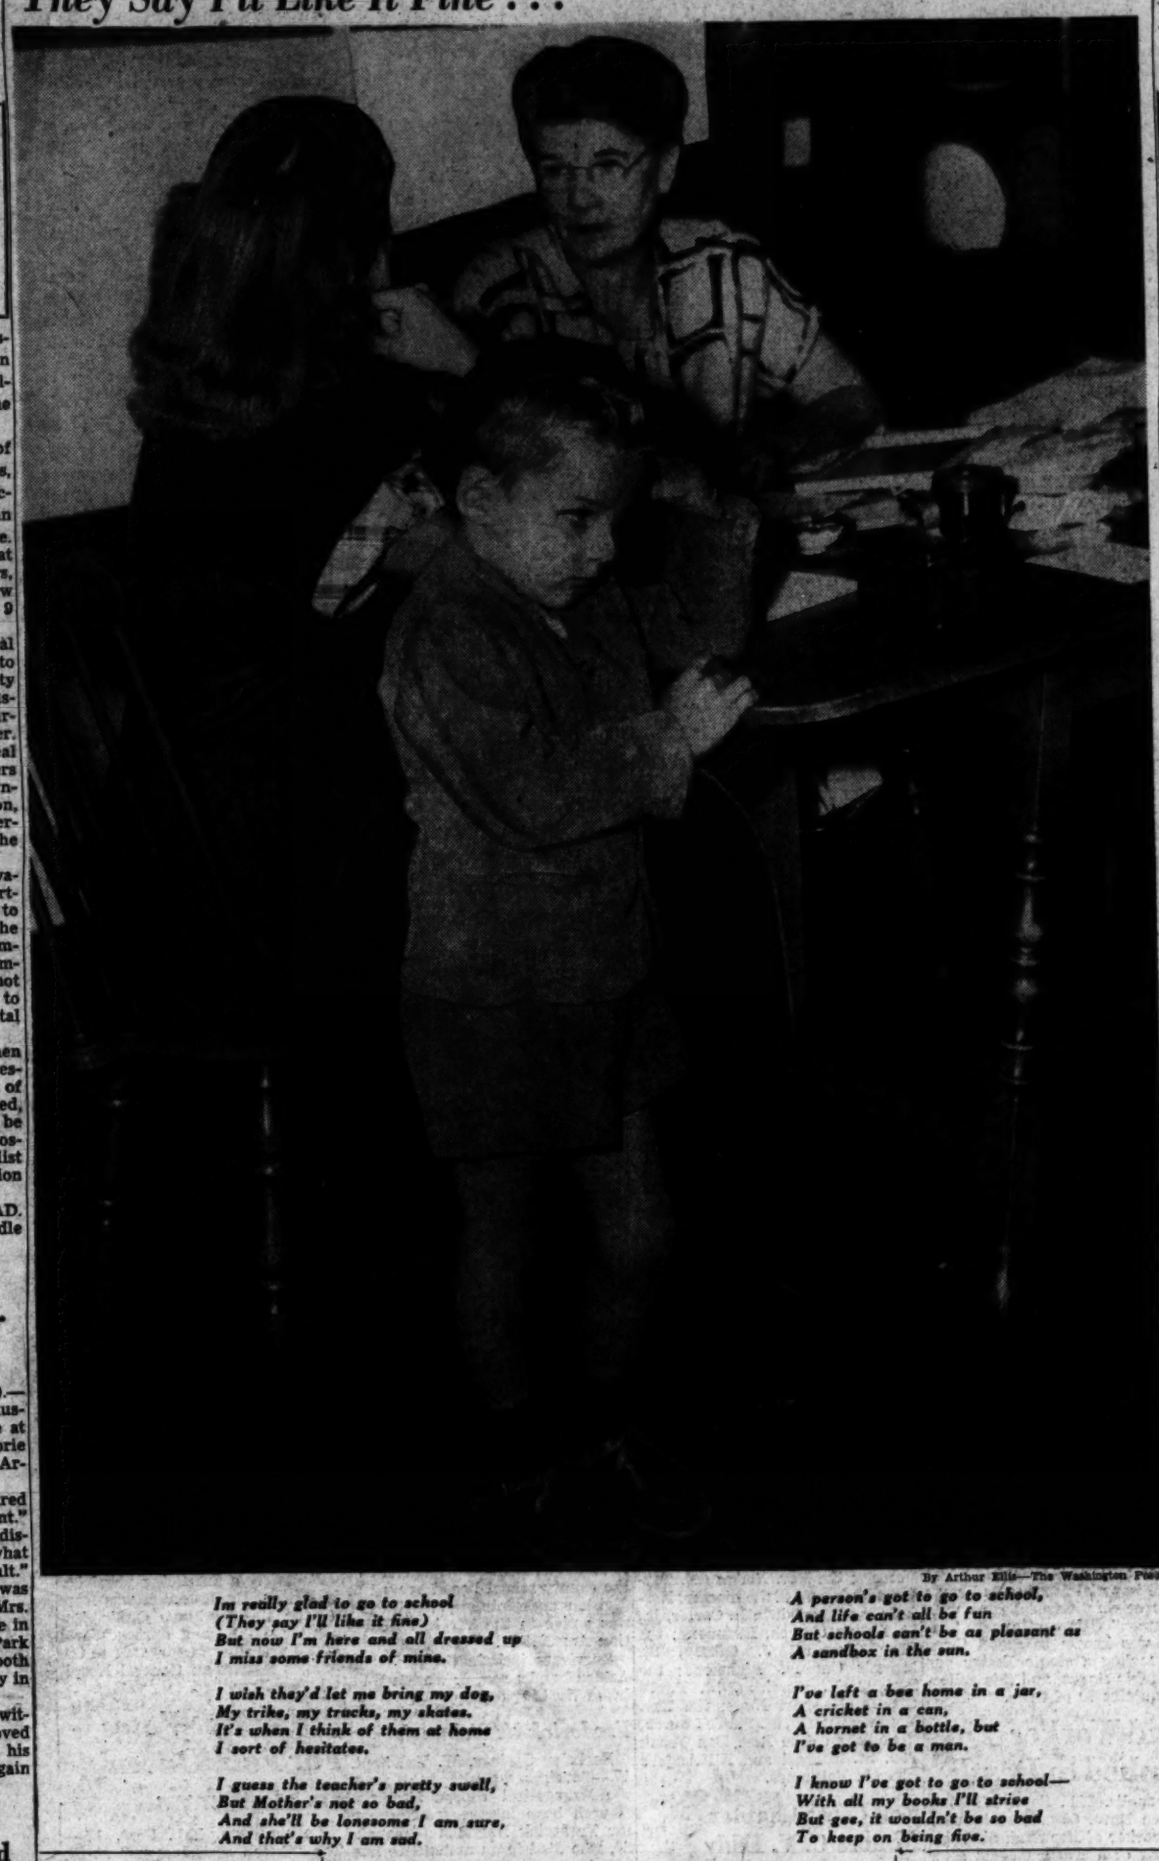
On the stand as a defense witness, Rae acknowledged he "loved Marjorie" and had called at his wife's home only to 'a'sk her again for a divorce."

Oyster Conservation Committeemen Named

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 17 (AP).—Herbert Sadler and Frank Bembe of Eastport were elected last night to a five-man committee to represent Anne Arundel County in cooperating with the Tidewater Fisheries Commission on oyster conservation.

Three other licensed oystermen will be named at a meeting in Deale, September 22, Gilbert H. Moore, executive secretary of the Commercial Fisheries Association, said.

'They Say I'll Like It Fine . . .'



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

I'm really glad to go to school
(They say I'll like it fine)
But now I'm here and all dressed up
I miss some friends of mine.

I wish they'd let me bring my dog,
My trike, my trucks, my skates.
It's when I think of them at home
I sort of hesitates.

I guess the teacher's pretty swell,
But Mother's not so bad,
And she'll be lonesome I am sure,
And that's why I am sad.

And life can't all be fun
But schools can't be as pleasant as
A sandbox in the sun.

A cricket in a can,
A hornet in a bottle, but
I've got to be a man.

I know I've got to go to school—
With all my books I'll strive
But gee, it wouldn't be so bad
To keep on being five.

Arlington Jail Installs New Master Door Lock

2 Who Used Wooden Key to Escape Are Caught in District

Prisoners helped install a new lock at the Arlington County Jail yesterday—just to make sure there won't be any more escapes from that happy home for miscreants.

Two inmates who violated the informality of the Arlington pokey Tuesday and picked their way to freedom with a wooden key were the cause of it all.

These flaunters of the code, Robert Lee Ray, 31, who specializes in picking strong boxes and jail doors, and Paul Crews, 30, who does not specialize, wasted their efforts. Both were picked up by police in the District yesterday.

So security was the order of the day at the Arlington Jail yesterday.

A locksmith was called in by Sheriff Homer G. Bauserman who said he wanted the 20-year-old padlocks on the cell doors replaced. The locksmith said it would take several weeks to get the new cell padlocks, but he did install a new lock in the master door leading from one of the cell blocks to the jail office.

The trusties who are allowed to pad around outside the cells were impressed with the operation.

One held tools for the locksmith as he worked. Another pressed his nose down near the lock and commented:

"Tricky. Very tricky."

From the old lock the locksmith pulled forth an imbedded one-inch splinter of wood.

"So they used a wooden key," remarked Jailer Roland Howes wonderingly.

Howes said no more will the jail be left unguarded as it was Tuesday morning when Ray and Crews escaped. The pair left while Howes, the only jailer on duty, was taking prisoners to court.

From now on, said Howes, the county police will call for and deliver court-appearing prisoners.

Only one of the wind-blown boys who disappeared Tuesday was back in jail yesterday. That was Crews. He was picked up by Metropolitan Police at 49 C st. se. at about 10:30 a. m. yesterday on a tip and waived extradition.

Refuses Extradition

Ray said no to the extradition, so he will be given a hearing in Municipal Court today. Ray escaped from the Arlington jail August 23 and was picked up three days later in Southeast Washington making passes at a finance company safe. He agreed to extradition that time.

Metropolitan Police thus had an opportunity to question Ray about some odd coincidences attending his arrest at about 8 a. m. yesterday in the 1150 block of Pennsylvania ave. se.

(Most striking coincidence, by the way, was that Ray was arrested by Pvt. Lennie M. Daniels of the Fifth Precinct who was one of two policemen who collared him after his previous escape.)

Some time Tuesday night a drug store at 4407 Bowen rd. se was broken into. The intruder tried to crack open the safe but couldn't. He finally settled for a brown cardigan sweater, a .32 caliber revolver and $11 in small change from the cash register. There were blood stains on the safe.

When Ray was picked up he was wearing blue dungarees and a brown cardigan sweater. His thumb was cut. He was unarmed.

Gets Hospital

Commodore Guilty of Sex Offense

A 56-year-old retired wartime convoy commodore was given a two-year suspended jail sentence yesterday for a sex offense in Montgomery County.

Naval Academy graduate, father of a 23-year-old son, Comdr. Ralph S. Parr of 438 Turner lane, Chevy Chase, Md., had been arrested for performing indecent acts in his bedroom window, in view of three small neighborhood children.

The children's parents complained to police. Bethesda detectives said they hid in the attic of the children's home and witnessed the performance.

Charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor in Montgomery County Juvenile Court at Rockville yesterday, Parr told Judge Alfred D. Noyes: "I have no way of reasonably accounting for my actions."

Under State law, maximum sentence for the charge is two years in jail and $500 fine. In suspending sentence, Judge Noyes emphasized the suspension was conditional on Parr's immediate admission to an institution for psychiatric treatment.

"I am not noly willing but anxious to undergo phychiatric treatments to effect a cure," the retired commander said.

Asked if he could finance the expensive hospitalization, Parr said yes, if he could retain his Navy retirement pay.

"But I have no certainty I can retain my retired status if disciplinary action is taken in this case," he added. The Navy had previously announced it would investigate the case.

Two psychiatrists, Dr. Mabel Wilkin, director of the Montgomery Mental Hygiene Clinic, and Dr. Stanley Eldred, of Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, testified the chances of a cure for Parr were "good," but it would take from six months to two years.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson concurred with the defense counsel, Barnard T. Welsh in the conditional suspension.

In both the District and Montgomery County there has been a campaign for more stringent sex offense laws that would make medical treatment of sex offenders compulsory.

Judges J. Howard Murray and Frederick B. Cobourne found him guilty after deliberating 15 minutes. They deferred sentence until defense motions for a new trial have been ruled on.

Truman Asks Agencies to Hire 900 Ousted Career Workers

...en carried out in a "fair and ...ly manner." But he quickly ...ded that it left a problem of ...ding jobs for the career people ...o had been discharged. At that ...int he wrote:

"I believe it to be the responsibility of the Federal Government to see that those who choose to make its service a career are protected in their right to useful and efficient employment as long as there are positions for which their qualifications are suited occupied by temporary or war service employes.

"To this end it is the policy of the Federal Government to return to duty in the Federal service as soon as possible separated career employes whose work has been satisfactory and whose services are needed. When they cannot be placed in vacancies, war service and temporary employes must be separated from their jobs the career employes are qualified to fill."

Throughout his letter, the President emphasized the jobless career employe must be qualified before he's to be given a job. Several weeks ago, the President is reported to have told his Cabinet that he did not want any agency to hire a poor and inefficient employe regardless of his Civil Service status.

His NFFE statement, however, is timely. The Civil Service Commission tomorrow will unveil officially its new program to find jobs for the displaced career people. The program, already revealed in this column, will require each agency to place a quota of the career people, and to fire additional youth centers three war service people for each career worker it fails to place.

There was speculation last night over whether the President's reference to a "modernized salary structure" would result in his asking Congress to raise salaries of all Federal workers. Generally, his statement was interpreted to mean he would support higher salaries for top-bracket employes whose salaries haven't been raised in years, and for the upward reclassifications of many jobs that haven't been changed since the Classification Act was passed in 1923.

Laudatory letters from Chairmen Langer and Rees of the Senate and House Civil Service Committees, respectively, were read at the dinner. Like the President, they applauded the "splendid and progressive leadership" of NFFE President Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally.

D. C. School Promotions Are Defended

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

In-service employes are given first consideration in promotions within the schol system, Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, told the Board of Education yesterday.

The school head defended his policies in recommending personnel changes at a meeting of the board at which two appointments were made and two major transfers approved.

The board also approved at the meeting, first of the new school term, the retirement of three school employes.

Corning told the board that of 36 major appointments and promotions made since he took over on March 1, 1946, 35 were of persons in the service of the schools.

39 Per Cent to Women

Dr. Corning's report followed recent criticism by several teacher groups that in-service employes are being overlooked in appointments and that women, especially, are not receiving fair consideration.

Corning said that of the 36 appointments, 14, or 38.8 per cent, have gone to women.

The report included a tabulation that showed that of 222 school officers, 135, or 60.1 per cent, are women.

A study of the Corning report shows that two of the top 11 school officials are women and that one was appointed since Corning took office. She is Miss Margaret R. Pepper, an employe of the school system for nearly 30 years, who last week was appointed executive assistant to the superintendent.

Bulk of the appointments of women were as principals and assistant principals.

Retirement Approved

Criticism of personnel policies arose six weeks ago when Dr. Carl Hansen, Omaha, Nebr., educator, was appointed associate superintendent in charge of curriculum revision and elementary schools. Dr. Hansen had held the position of executive assistant since March.

The Corning report lists the Hansen promotion as an in-service promotion.

Retirements approved by the board were:

Miss Florence T. Judge, 4320 44th st. nw., math teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School, after 23 years.

Mrs. Ann S. Johnson, 1243 Irving st. ne., first aid nurse assistant at Browne Junior High School, after 23 years.

Carl Trometre, 1423 Girard st. ne., who since 1932 has been in charge of cadet ordnance.

Appointments were:

Orson W. Trueworthy, 3729 Homes la., Alexandria, Paul Junior High School teacher, as principal of the Capitol Page School.

Mrs. Muriel M. Alexander, 1607 S st. nw., temporary assistant principal of Browne Junior High School.

District Public Schools Begin 3-Day Registration Period

District public schools, preparing for Monday's opening, yesterday began a three-day registration period for youngsters entering school here for the first time.

Principals of elementary schools were on hand to sign up kindergarten and first graders. High and junior high school offices were open to receive applications from transfers.

Registration will continue today and tomorrow with elementary schools remaining open from 2 to 6 p. m.

Registration in the night schools will be held Monday from 6 to 10 p. m.

School officials pointed out yesterday that the opening date this year is unusually late and that the closing date will be correspondingly late.

Under Board of Education rules, the opening date of school is set for the Monday that falls between the 17th and 23d of September and the closing date as the Wednesday falling between the 17th and 23d of June. That date next June is the 23d.

School officials said that the vagaries of the calendar won't shorten the number of days of instruction for the District pupil. The number of days this year will be 179.

A look at nearby Maryland and Virginia communities shows, though, that the District has the shortest schedule. Arlington schools which opened September 3 will close June 11th after 190 teaching days.

Montgomery schools are offering 186 days of instruction between September 10 and June 18 and Prince Georges County schools 185 days between September 10 and June 17.

Alexandria opened its schools September 4 and will close the elementary schools June 11th and the high schools June 12. There are 180 days in the school year. Fairfax County has scheduled 182 days of instruction between September 4 and June 9.

Here Is the Story Of School Picture

Here's the story of the extremely human picture showing a dreamy youngster as his mother registers him for school.

He is Stephen Lee Fisher, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Fisher of 1735 New Hampshire ave. nw. And he's starting in the kindergarten this year.

Washington Post photographer Arthur Ellis, assigned to photograph the registration of pupils for the opening of District public schools, went to the John Quincy Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw.

He posed Stephen Lee Fisher against a bookcase with a birth certificate in his hand. When Ellis finished making his "shot," the boy walked over to the registration desk to wait patiently while his mother talked things over with the principal, Mrs. Florence Cornell. He waited patiently all right, but his mind was on many things outside that room. This was when Ellis got the great unposed picture above. This is what news cameramen call the "instant in photography."

Ellis was using the standard 4 by 5 speed graphic camera, with a synchronized No. 5 photo flash bulb. He shot at 200th of a second at F.8, with Super Panchro press type B film. He was 10 feet from the subject.

Schools Need 50 Doctors, Board Told

Fifty doctors and 100 nurses are needed to give public school children adequate medical attention, Dr. James N. Gannon, physician member of the Board of Education, said yesterday.

He told the board that the service provided the schools by the Health Department last year was not worth the gasoline required to transport the nurses to the schools.

He read from a report of Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer, that nursing aid averaged not more than half a day a week in each elementary school and half a day a month at each junior and senior high school.

"What possible good could a nurse do with thousands of children under her care?" Gannon said.

Not Criticizing

The physician said he was not criticizing Dr. Ruhland and pointed out that the Health Officer has but 74 nurses assigned to the Health Department.

Dr. Gannon declared, though, that the Health Department should have been able to supply an otologist, an ophthalmologist and an audiometer technician even if only part time. These positions were vacant during the school year, the Ruhland report said, because trained personnel was not available.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning told the board that Ruhland is preparing a report on what the Health Department considers adequate school medical care.

"When we know what the program is, we can join the Health Department in seeking funds from Congress," Corning said.

Never Been Presented

Gannon agreed that the Health Department estimate will be "a great step in the right direction" and said that the problem never has been adequately presented to Congress.

Board actions yesterday included:

Waiver of rules to permit the United States Navy Recruiting Service to obtain from the high schools names and addresses of boys graduating from the schools last June.

Approval of plans for four new buildings and three additions which the committee on buildings and grounds approved on Tuesday.

Approva lof the Board of Public Welfare request to use the Truesdell, Grant, Mott and Harrison Schools for child day care centers.

Approval of a request by The Washington to sponsor a studeat art contest in the high schools. Winning paintings will decorate The Washington Post calendar. The newspaper sponsored such a contest in 1946.

States Are Urged To Legislate for Water Sanitation

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 17.—Harry S. Workman, New Cumberland, W. Va., county sanitarian, yesterday told a group of sanitation experts that States should have legislation providing for uncontaminated water supplies.

Workman was one of the speakers at a four-day seminar on sanitation at Cacapcon Park here. Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina and Washington sanitation experts are attending the meetings.

Progress in obtaining safer private water supplies for rural areas has been particularly slow, according to Conley W. Weston of Fauquier County, Va. W. R. Anderson, regional supervisor of sanitation of the Virginia Health Department, urged use of DDT and other insecticides to prevent spread of disease by flies.

Baltimore, Sept. 17 (AP).—Lloyd Douglas George, 26, barge worker, today was sentenced to 18 months in jail for the death of a woman whose body was found floating in the harbor July 23.

In Memoriam

BOSWELL, JOHN ROGER, JR. In memory of our beloved son and brother, JOHN ROGER BOSWELL, JR., reported killed in action on September 14, 1944, in Italy.
We wept the day you marched away,
Looking so handsome, brave, and grand;
Our kisses on your forehead lay,
We clung to your parting hand.
You were our darling, so young and brave,
Wearing on your pale, sweet face
A smile so full of grace,
To help ease the burdens you were to brave.
Your letters were always so cheerful,
Even though the battles were numbered;
Not a word was ever tearful,
You help fight them and never murmured.
From North Africa to Italy, high and low,
You helped conquer the enemy in their strides;
The battles of the Anzio, Casaino, Rome, and St. Lo,
Were taken with great pride.
The years are slowly passing by,
We miss you more than words can express;
Ever since the day you said, "Good-bye,"
Our hearts have been filled with sadness.
We're watching and waiting for you,
Yearning to see the light,
That shone in your eyes of blue,
And the curls of your brow so bright.
HIS LOVING FAMILY.
(Mother & Father, Sisters & Brothers.)

Mother's Notes To 'Dear Son' In FDR Book

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT is up to his ears in two projects, both of them interesting, and only one can get him in trouble. First he is doing the delicate job of editing the correspondence between his father and grandmother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt. Letters from the famous mother to her only son flew thick as snow flakes from FDR's boyhood until her death. And President Roosevelt was an equally faithful correspondent.

Many of the letters are of international interest; others, mainly from Mrs. Roosevelt, are charming though sensible epistles which women readers will simply gobble up.

Elliott's second task is another trip to Europe and after a thorough swing around he'll settle down to a second book. We bet that other members of the Roosevelt clan will rue the day Elliott's sure-to-be-free-thinking tome rolls off the press!

Glamour Gal Coming

THERE'S a new glamour girl coming to town. She's war correspondent, playwright, story-teller Martha Gellhorn who, not so long ago was Ernest Hemingway's third wife. Tall, handsome, extremely intelligent Martha, who's now Miss Gellhorn, will be at the home of Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas.

She's here, perhaps we should whisper it, to turn out some gems for the New Republic, Henry Wallace's gazette. If there's a special session of Congress, Helen will return from political travail in California and Martha'll have to house hunt.

At United Nations Club

EVERYTHING again is rosy at the United Nations Club. What looks like another big season of the international goodwilling activities that have gone on there since 1941 is getting under way.

Members were put in a dither a few weeks ago when legal actions were instituted against a private enterprise of John Stum, former club treasurer and manager, and Bill Arnold, a patron of the club.

There was a confused impression that the club itself might be involved. (The suit actually is over $580,000 worth of milk bought from a Detroit firm by an Arnold-owned company.) It's none of the Club's affair.

To make this plain Mr. Stum resigned as manager and treasurer. Lots of people, including this department, which mistakenly said so, thought Mr. Arnold was an "owner" of the club. He is not even one of its incorporators. The club is not a profit-making organization, in any case. We are glad to spike this rumor. The incorporators are Theckla M. Pell, Alla Kent, Suzanne Rosenberg, Meredith Howard, Rosemary Tyler, Felicity Rumbold and Elizabeth Hoyar Miller.

To make the financial position of the club clear beyond all question, the officers have engaged Price, Waterhouse & Co., the accounting firm, to make a full audit of the receipts of the organization and a full report on its extensive activities over the past several years. This report should be out shortly.

Not because it would make any difference to the members of the diplomatic set who flock to the R street clubhouse functions, but just in the interest of accuracy, we wish to correct a report about the club's beautiful president, Meredith Howard. She did not play Lady Godiva in the 1927 musical comedy success, "Whoopee." Some New York and Detroit press clips said she did—and we copied them. But it isn't so. She was in "Whoopee" all right, but not as Lady Godiva. Her marital career has been garbled too (by us and others). A 1929 elopement marriage to Albert Spurlock, a university football coach, was annulled. Later, she married and divorced Russell Erskine. Now she is neither married nor engaged.

Let's hope the audit is out soon and the United Nation's Club has another of its bang-up seasons.

Y., yesterday became the first nurse and the third woman to receive the Medal of Merit, this country's highest wartime honor for civilians. She Likes to Play It—and Write About It

Politics Is Marie Brown's Game

By Marie McNair

POLITICS—sometimes called the great American game—is the only game as far as Mrs. Thad Brown is concerned.

She played it effectively in Ohio until the late Thad Brown came to Washington as a member of the bipartisan Federal Trade Commission. Her collection of autographed photographs includes many of the great and near great who have been friends or acquaintances down through the years.

Now keen-thinking Marie Brown has turned columnist. Under the name of Marie Thrailkill Brown, she's turning out a daily political piece under the title, "Behind the Scenes," for the Dayton, Ohio, Journal-Herald, which is published also in a number of other Ohio papers. Moreover, Mrs. Brown has been appointed head of the Washington bureaus of two of the Ohio papers for which she writes.

Back From Brascoupe

On the job since April, Marie Brown took time out for a brief holiday this summer, in fact only returned to town a few days ago, after three weeks in northern Canada. As the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Nash of Detroit, she enjoyed the benefits of the famous Brascoupe Club near Hudson Bay, where Indian guides show you the spots to fish and cook your luncheon in the shade of the deep forests, and where the telephone never rings. Only an occasional plane, keeping watch for forest fires, is a reminder that it's a modern world we live in.

Brascoupe is restricted to half a hundred or so families. Wendell Willkie was a member, and others who belong are Dr. Brooks Emeny, president of the Foreign Policy Association of the United States, and E. J. Thomas of Akron, Ohio, executive with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. President of the de luxe camp is Bernard C. Cobb of New York.

Mrs. Brown returned in time to welcome back her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., who with their small children, Thad 3d, and Bettina, have been spending the summer at Quogue, Long Island.

TO MRS. ALF HEIBERG goes the credit for the revival of the dansant, the rage of the "roaring '20's."

Strains of a dance band floated out on Georgetown streets yesterday afternoon from the Heiberg's house on 34th st. and inside Francine Whitten and Lewis MacCracken were dancing at the final party in their honor before their marriage tomorrow.

Some 75 young people were there yesterday and Major and Mrs. Heiberg had asked only a handful of their friends. A newcomer in the midst was Miss Nan Tucker of Burlingame, Calif., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neon Tucker, and niece of George Cameron, owner of the San Francisco Chronicle. Miss Tucker, a lovely young charmer, is at the Hay-Adams for the nonce, but is looking for a Georgetown house. She'll spend the winter here to do some newspaper work.

Also there yesterday were Admiral and Mrs. Charles O. Bunker, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, Clarence Hewes and Merritt Swift.

TOWN TOPICS

The Luttrell mansion, which dominates the hill at Connecticut ave. and Columbia rd., has gone the way of most houses of its size. Too large, too expensive to keep up as a private residence, the white palazzo was until recently occupied by the State Department's Foreign Service School. Now it's been leased for the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau.

The Stanley Hornbecks—he is our former Ambassador to the Netherlands—are just back from three months in Colorado, where Vivienne Hornbeck first saw the light of day. They motored both ways, using their car to commute between Denver and Estes Park, where they took a house for the season.

Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett's favorite spot for luncheon is La Salle du Bois, where he has a special seat in the corner.

Indian Envoy Fetes Statistical Group

The Charge d'Affairs of the Indian Embassy and Mrs. B. R. Sen were hosts at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon to some 200 guests, including delegates to the International Statistical Conference and diplomats from various embassies. Guests gathered in the large drawing room and on the terrace overlooking Rock Creek Park.

Visits Williamsburg

Pierre Siraud, Counselor of the French Embassy, was a visitor to historic Williamsburg, Va., early this week. He stopped at the Williamsburg Inn.

Son to Arnolds

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. George Arnold in Passavent Hospital, Chicago, Ill. Born September 16, the baby will be named Andrew Pearson Arnold.

Mrs. Arnold is the daughter of Drew Pearson and Countess Felicia Gizycka. Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold are the baby's paternal grandparents.

Happy Parents of Dear Little Daughter Who Is Just Becoming Aware of Christmas Ask Whether to Give Her Belief in Santa

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Both my husband and I would appreciate an impartial opinion in this matter. We are a young and very happy couple, blessed with a dear little daughter. She has reached the age when the Christmas story will make its first definite impression upon her.

Like so many others, my husband was reared to believe in Santa Claus. Of course, as he got a bit older, he came to realize it was a myth. I, on the other hand, was taught the story of St. Nick, and how the custom is kept by one's family and friends, to express love of others on the feast of the Nativity.

My father, a doctor who died when I was 7, hated any kind of falsity, and believed that children would never know whom to trust again, if their own parents told them a story about Santa Claus which later learning would expose as a lie.

Mother Thinks Santa a Hoax

I HAVE heard people say, "Oh, telling children about Santa isn't telling a lie, and children are so cute when they believe in Santa Claus!" All I can think of is the disillusionment that awaits these deluded tots.

Would I be depriving our daughter of a special childhood joy if I told her confidentially that people were only making-believe when they talk about Santa Claus? Would she feel she had missed something? Or would she react as I did? I felt delighted to be let in on the secret that older folks were only pretending about Santa Claus.

I never told my childhood friends what I knew, for I was warned by my parents not to give out this precious information, but I honestly think I felt a bit smug and secretly happy about my superior knowledge. However, my husband thinks Christmas and Santa Claus go together; and having traded views with complete amiability, we await your decision. We share the same faith and have approximately the same degree of spiritual feeling. L. S.

Don't Make Child Precociously Wise

DEAR L. S.: I doubt that it's any favor to a child to try to drill adult knowingness into him from the time he is able to understand words. Better, I think, to let his faculty to discriminate between wondrous fantasy and prosaic reality grow apace with his intellectual and bodily development.

Possibly Christmas is never again quite so magic for the child who has raptly believed in Santa Claus and then discovers he is a myth and not a jolly old flesh-and-blood fellow. But if Santa, or his equivalent, weren't royally welcome and deeply nourishing to the heart of childhood, the folk custom of invoking his name at Christmas never would have developed and hung on.

It is interesting that your defense of your Christmas indoctrination takes the form of pitying children who must finally wake from make-believe. Isn't that your old childish smugness speaking? Isn't that a self-justifying echo of your parents' apologia, for denying you a Santa Claus and giving you instead the dubious consolation of feeling forlornly superior to wide-eyed believers?

What's Christmas Without Santa?

AS FOR the after-effects upon the disenchanted, do you find any noxious traits in your husband's character, any want of spiritual leaven or social feeling, that could be traced to his outworn faith in Santa Claus? Or can you, on the other hand, point to rare and special virtues in your own make-up which issue directly from your no-nonsense adherence to the straight story of St. Nick? Apparently not, for you say you're evenly balanced as to civilized quality.

All things considered, I think your husband got the better deal on the Christmas story. While he was a child, he felt as a child on that score; and the experience was rich and full while it lasted. Obviously he feels no resultant cynicism, but rather an abiding conviction that Christmas without Santa were a tepid time for little folk; to which I say amen.

For advice: Give your daughter Santa Claus. Later she will learn from church and school that he derives from St. Nick; and that his name, indeed, is an American corruption of the Dutch spelling, San Nicolaas. In due season also she will imbibe the spiritual significance of Christmas, but for the present don't try to make her precociously wise. M. H.

What about the husband and wife who are getting downright bored with each other and their life together? Mary Haworth probes into the problem in her column tomorrow.

Child Dreams Up Companion Because He Needs Real Ones

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The child who is imaginative and plays alone much of the time, is quite apt to dream up an imaginary companion. Such a playmate is so real that inevitably he becomes real to the parents. The companion has to share in all the child's activities. He has to be talked to the same as the child, learns all the rhymes with him, listens to his stories and goes to bed with him.

This worries the parent. She feels as if the child were losing touch with reality. She looks upon this as an escape which may become habitual so that conflict with real children may drive him into solitude.

Needs Playmate

All this is possible, as anything is possible, but it is hardly probable. The child who manufactures a playmate needs real playmates. Maybe these are not available because the child is young—3 to 4 presumably—lives far from other small children, is the youngest of a family who ignore him and many other situations.

It is probable, too, that he may find association with other children not so satisfying or so agreeable, as with this made-up playmate who does as his master dictates and is everything he could wish him to be.

But, imagination is a vital asset, too, and there would seem to be no harm in this imaginary playmate, who will be outgrown as the child mingles more with other children. Meanwhile, it can be a great comfort, it can inspire the child to activities which would be drab if engaged in alone, but are exciting and interesting with this gay and ever-ready playmate.

Reasons Are Many

Naturally, a mother should try to end the lonesomeness of the child. She should be alert to difficulties the child is suffering when he plays with companions. He gets relief from them when his little playmate takes orders and does as he says, and this relief may be salutary.

Often by the fourth year, the child no longer speaks of his companion. Meanwhile, the parents keep in touch with reality, not by refusing him the boon of his companion but by refusing to accept him and play up to him. This will make the distinction for the child between his own world of the imagination and the real world.

EASE AND GRACE AND A DASH OF DICKENS

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

Maurice Rentner dresses are utterly delightful to wear. They are magically proportioned and have the pliability and fine finish of custom dressmaking.

Rentner intends his clothes to slip unobtrusively into the fashion scene. They recognize fashion changes, but with a certain worldly nonchalance.

One of the most important themes running through the Maurice Rentner collection is a neckline treatment reminiscent of the dashing winged collar worn in Dickens' day. This charming black rayon crepe has a beautifully bejeweled Dickens collar over a neckband in surprising color contrast. The collar makes the most beautiful frame imaginable for your face—attracting all eyes to your head, so proudly set. This is a self-confident dress, and we think it perfect for cocktails.

UN Week Keynote of Programs

Observance of United Nations Week keynoted yesterday's meetings of Washington clubwomen.

At the Woman's National Democratic Club, 1528 New Hampshire ave nw., where the official season won't get into swing until early next month, a special luncheon meeting was held with Dr. Arthur Sweetser, director of the Washington information office of the United Nations, as guest speaker. Earlier, however, members gathered at the clubhouse for an open forum on "Means of Strengthening the United Nations," then listened to Secretary of State George Marshall's radio broadcast from Lake Success.

Introduced by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, Dr. Sweetser compared the uncertainty and distress surrounding the last years of the League of Nations with the feeling of progress in the United Nations.

Always New

"There is always something new on the agenda," he explained, "not something a diplomat thought up—but something pressing."

Drawing a comprehensive word picture of the U. N.—its personnel, machinery and problems—he emphasized that this was just a beginning. He urged individuals to work ceaselessly on behalf of the United Nations until everyone realizes that the organization is the most important thing on earth.

A further observance of United Nations Week will be the tea to be held at the club tomorrow from 4 to 6 p. m. when honor guests will be wives of diplomats whose countries belong to the U. N.

Noted Women to Attend

Among those who have already accepted invitations are Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador; Senora de Castro, wife of the Ambassador of El Salvador; Mrs. H. T. Andrews, wife of the South African Minister; Mrs. Thor Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister; Mrs. Narciso Ramos, wife of the Philippine Minister; Mrs. B. R. Sen, wife of the Indian Minister, and Mme. van Bellinghen, wife of the First Secretary of the Belgian Embassy.

Those pouring tea will include Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, assisted by officers of the club.

John Haldermann Addresses Zonta Club

The Zonta Club, which has been devoting its meetings for the past three weeks to various phases of the United Nations, yesterday listened to a discussion of the General Assembly and the Human Rights Commission of the U. N. by John Haldermann, assistant chief, Division of International Organization Affairs, Department of State.

"The General Assembly is assuming the role of a World Town Meeting," he declared, "with a scope as broad as the charter of the United Nations itself." This second regular session, he said, is a real test of the strength of the U. N.

Taking an optimistic view of U. N. problems that have been making headlines, Mr. Haldermann pointed out that it would be unrealistic to think such a group of major powers would be without differences; it would be a reversal of anything in history.

Two major purposes served by the General Assembly, he emphasized, are 1) the repository of an idea of international justice and 2) furnishing and instrument through which these ideas may be made to work and avoid war.

Among special guests introduced at the luncheon meeting, held at the Dodge Hotel, were Judge Wanda Grabinska, Polish woman jurist visiting this country; Miss Emma K. Roesing and Mrs. Mattie Bell Davis, lawyers from Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Ruth Kendall, of London.

"The United Nations has passed its infancy," Judge Grabinska declared in a brief talk, "and if the United States will act as probation officer, it is hoped the U. N. will not develop into a juvenile delinquent."

"What the U. N. hopes to accomplish," she continued, "America has done in the feeling of cooperation among its own people, especially those of foreign birth who have come to look upon the United States as their mother and the 'old country'—Poland, for example—as the grandmother."

Hard of Hearing Group Plans Meeting Tomorrow

A report on the experimental use of hearing aids on three and four year old children will be given at the meeting of the parent study group of the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing tomorrow, 7:30 p. m., in the society's headquarters, 2431 14th st. nw. Mrs. Max Chapman, president of the group, will preside.

The meeting is open to all parents of deafened children and to others interested in the welfare of the hard-of-hearing child. The parent study group meets the third Friday of every month and, in addition, a six-week course for parents will be held Thursday, 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., beginning October 2.

Something Old And Something New...

FROM ONE OF America's most renowned milinery houses come these two striking examples of hat styles—1947. One, with a wide side-to-side brim effect, incorporates the new fashion notions; the other is a modern version of the casual classic with broad dipping brim and high crown. Here is proof that this year a woman can dress as she chooses. She may select a dramatic, high-fashion hat, or she may retain her tailored look with a conservative, well-tested style that has remained essentially unchanged for the last 20 years.

Both these models are made of rich Italian velour, the first to be used in this country since before the war. They are available in either black or brown and are trimmed with sweeping pheasant feathers of yellow, blue and green. Both may be purchased at an F st. specialty shop.

Europe Needs Real Aid, Not Dole, DAR Hears

"DEMOCRACY is not something that peoples catch by contagion like measles . . . it must be evolved, worked for and then worked at or it fails."

So declared Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of history at George Washington University; when he spoke in Memorial Continental Hall last night on the program presented by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution in celebration of the 160th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

"I confess I am thinking about this American Republic in the world of 1947," he said. "The will of this people is going to have to be expressed in a wider range of problems than we have ever before confrontd."

Pointing out the chaos in other countries today and referring to the Truman doctrine and the Marshall plan as "an American, not a partisan," Dr. Kayser continued, "We cannot allow our brethren overseas, who look to us, to face starvation and exposure. At the same time, we must not perpetuate their misery by handing out doles . . . Any sound system of relief is based on the principle of giving aid to make relief unnecessary."

Last night's program, arranged by a committee headed by Mrs. C. Edward Channing, opened with a concert of American music by the Navy Band orchestra and a massing of the colors by white-clad pages passing through lines of the American Legion National Guard of Honor.

Mrs. Michael Torlinski, chairman of the committee on correct use of the flag, led the pledge of allegiance. Mrs. Manly Miller, State chaplain, gave the invocation and Mrs. David Wells read the preamble to the Constitution.

Expect Furs to Cost More
Winnipeg, Sept. 1 (AP)—Fur auction sales here indicate mink will pay more for her fur coat this year.
Officials of a Winnipeg fur auction company report prices ranged 10 to 25 per cent. This is partially attributed to depleted stocks on the American market and the lateness of spring which caused fewer pelt deliveries from the north.
American buyers, anxious to obtain as many pelts as possible for their fall trade, have been bidding vigorously, particularly on short haired furs such as muskrat, beaver, mink and weasel. Long-haired furs [illegible] appear [illegible]

"Why don't you be sociable . . . and SCRAM!"

Ask Anne
Your Questions On Homemaking

1. Is it possible to freshen feathers that are quite old? I have an old bolster that I should like to make into pillows for the children's bed, but I feel that the feathers need some treatment first.

2. Is there any safe, satisfactory method of cleaning dark pigskin gloves at home?

E. A. C.

1. Feathers are often found to be broken, sometimes even pulverized, inside the ticking of old pillows and bolsters. Even when feathers are in fair condition, it's difficult to freshen them at home. They need washing or steaming, sterilizing with air or steam at high temperature, and fluffing to make them springy again. A number of local companies are equipped to do this work. You'll find them listed under "Mattresses" in the yellow section of your telephone directory.

2. Most genuine pigskin gloves are washable. However, they shouldn't be laundered unless they were sold as washable and have never been dry-cleaned. If dry-cleaning is necessary, it's better to send them to a professional.

To wash them at home, put them on your hands and suds in lukewarm water with plenty of mild soap. Squeeze and press dirt out, instead of rubbing. If there are stubborn spots of soil, use a soft brush on them, gently. When gloves are clean, slip them off the wrist. An easy way is to fill the gloves with water while they are on the hands and gently squeeze the top of the glove with a downward motion until the fingers slip out. Wash the inside to remove any soil left by your hands. Turn right side out and rinse in lukewarm water. Pat out excess water. Shape and puff out fingers by blowing in them. Place on glove frames or hang over ends of wooden hanger. When they are almost dry, soften by working gently with fingers. Dry away from heat.

2. Have you a recipe for making stew with left-over meat and canned vegetable soup as the base?

A. McH.

1. Pour glycerine or soapless shampoo on the spot, rub between the hands, rinse, and apply glycerine again as long as any ink comes from the stain. Rinse with clear water. If this doesn't remove the spot, sponge the stain with cold water, then stretch over a bowl of hot water, and apply crystals of oxalic acid directly on the stain. Rinse by dipping in the hot water, and finally in water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added.

2. A recipe for stew made with cooked meat and vegetable soup follows:

2 cups cooked meat, cut in inch cubes
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons fat
1 small onion, diced
2 cans condensed vegetable soup
1 cup water

Toss meat in flour, then brown lightly in fat with the onion. Add soup and water, mixing well. Simmer gently 15 minutes. This recipe serves six.

I have an old portrait (oil painting) that has become soiled and dull from hanging so long on the wall. How can I clean it safely? I would like to bring out the colors again. V. H.

I gather, since you say your painting is an old portrait, that it is a valued possession. If this is so, it would probably be best to take it to an art shop where an experienced craftsman can restore it for you. These old paintings usually become dulled because the varnish over the oil has dulled. To refresh them, the varnish has to be removed and new varnish applied. As you can see, this takes skillful hands not to mar the surface of the painting.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Apartment For Rent, But You Wouldn't Like It

F. S. A. of 625 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va., reports that a bird has built its nest in the street light at the corner of Glebe rd. and Lee blvd.

Apparently the modern design of the fixture fooled our feathered friend into thinking it a bird-house.

But F. S. A. is worried that the poor creature won't be able to sleep nights, so he's drawn up a classified ad for the bird:

"Bright apartment, light housekeeping, corner location, excellent heating facilities. Will sub-let cheep cheep or trade for something with Venetian blinds."

FISH PROBLEM REVISITED

Paul Lawrence Schmehl checked into Georgetown Hospital the other day, tipping the beam at 7 pounds and 11 ounces.

In a few days Paul will move to 2028 20th rd. North, Arlington, Va., where he'll make his home with Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Schmehl.

When you get home, Paul, please give your pop this message: "Your variation on Margaret Hawkins' fish problem is even worse than the original. I had enough trouble getting the answer to her version. Yours in utter frustration, W. E. G."

The following District Liners agreed with my solution (that an infinite number of answers are possible; 781 plus any multiple of 3125):

H. C. Messerschmidt of the United States Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md.

George H. Graham of 3401 Prospect ave. nw. (a foreign service student at Georgetown University); and Richard G. Terwilliger of 47 Maryland ave., Annapolis, Md.

Richard, incidentally, wrote his letter before our answer appeared. He sighed:

"I regret that you will not receive this letter before you go on record Monday with the dogmatic statement that yours is THE correct answer, inasmuch as an infinite number of correct answers are possible." (Fooled you, didn't I, Dick?)

I suspect that Elwin R. Main of 640 C st. ne. also had the right answer, but I can't be sure.

He used a flock of mathematical terms and formulas that would wrinkle Einstein's brow.

So let's concede that he's right. I certainly don't want an argument with a man like that.

PET PEEVE

H. Smith of 606 Longfellow st. nw. wants to know:

"What can we do about groups of people who stand around and gab on busy street corners, in halls, doorways, and at other points where they block traffic?

"Are the rest of us supposed to resort to football tactics to get by them?"

HIC!

I long to go behind the bar
(Whenever one's in reach)
Where all the fancy bottles are
And drink a dram from each.
Jay Aitch.

PERSONAL NOTE

Mary Reed: Dunno what happened to that letter, but I never received it. W. E. G.

REBUTTAL

Mary Gilbert of 6119 7th pl. nw. comes to my defense with this note:

"I don't agree with Billie Turner's reasoning at all. If one becomes a bad neighbor by liking good music the way the composer wrote it, then I'm also guilty—and so are many others.

"Chopin wrote some of the most beautiful music of all time. If Cugat wants to play rumbas, there are many other selections and composers from which he can choose. He should let poor Chopin rest in peace."

PLATTER PROBLEMS

Here are two more District Liners with record troubles.

Mrs. J. H. VornDick of 895 N. Kentucky st., Arlington, Va., is stumped in her search for two discs for her mother's birthday.

She's after Wayne King's "Lonesome, That's All" and Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade."

C. Black of 45 R st. ne. has a more unusual story. (He's looking for Buddy Johnson's "When My Man Comes Home," and the old Glenn Miller versions of "At Last" and "A Stone's Throw From Heaven.")

The reason? He loaned his records to some sailors while en route to an invasion point during the war. And of course when the LST hit the beach, the records slipped his mind for a while.

ADD SIGNS

At the approach to the loading platform at Union Station there's a sign that says:

"Empty cars use third lane."

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

OH, MABEL! CAN Y' HEAR ME?
YES, I CAN HEAR YOU. WHAT IS IT?
LISTEN TO THIS. A WASHINGTON SOCIETY LEADER HOSTED A BIG LUNCHEON TO HELP LAUNCH A RED CROSS DRIVE. ONE OF THE HIGH DIGNITARIES IN ATTENDANCE PATTED THE HOSTESS' LITTLE DAUGHTER ON THE HEAD AND SAID—
—AREN'T WE A BIG HELP TO OUR DEAR MOTHER. WHAT IS OUR TASK FOR TODAY?" "OUR TASK FOR TODAY," SNAPPED THE LITTLE DAUGHTER, "IS TO SEE THAT NONE OF YOU BOZOS TRY TO GET AWAY WITH ANY OF THE SILVER."
WELL, IS THAT ALL YOU WANTED TO SAY? IF YOU HAVE NOTHING BETTER TO DO I WISH YOU'D HELP ME MOVE THESE PLANTS

Ex-D. A. Keeps in Shape a New Way

NEW YORK—Martin W. Littleton, jr., the former District Attorney of Nassau County, is in New York this week representing a defendant in the Mergenthaler embezzlement case. Littleton's home now is a 2000-acre ranch near Cody, Wyo., where he raises prize herds. "But what do you do when the snows come?" a lawyer asked him . . . "When the snows come I put on my spurs and boots, ride into Cody and hunt up a criminal case to try," said Littleton. "It keeps me from going stale" . . . "And can you always find a case?" he was asked . . .

"Sure," said the famed lawyer. "My last case was defending a sheep-herder for fighting in a saloon."

This is a story told in Chicago of the publisher who hired a rain-maker to go up in a plane, drop some of his rain-making capsules into a cloud and produce rain. Last December he became convinced that it worked—and that he could produce rain whenever the farmers of the old Midwest needed it for their crops.

He then inquired about the possibility of producing snow, and was assured that the same capsules, if dropped into the right cloud, would produce snow. "In that case," he resolved, "I'm going to give Chicago a White Christmas" . . . He was dissuaded by his lawyer, who suggested that if any citizen of Chicago slipped and fell because of the snow he had produced, the publisher might be liable for damages."

When Lic. Com. Fielding attended the first showing of "The Outlaw" in N. Y., it was for the purpose of determining whether Hughes' promise regarding the movie ads had been kept, and whether Hughes had kept his pledge to delete three objectionable scenes. Otherwise, Fielding could have canceled the theater license. He found that Hughes' promise had been kept . . .

A brief signed by non-Zionists and non-Jews will be submitted to the U. N.'s General Assembly concerning Palestine . . .

A producer, who read a new Saroyan play, told the author that a magazine editor would be glad to buy it if the play were adapted into story form. "I don't want it in a magazine," Saroyan told him, "because in a magazine my cousin can't play in it."

During the war some FBI agents descended on an enemy-alien scientist working in Chicago. The agents had learned that he had a shortwave sending set, and insisted that it be sur-rendered . . . He was working, at the time, in one of the top posts at Manhattan Project, and was one of the most important contributors to the making of the atomic bomb. But he had taken an oath of secrecy and could not violate it even to the FBI . . . He meekly surrendered the set, and still hasn't received it back.

Sally Kirkland is switching from Vogue to Life magazine, where she will be the new fashion editor . . . O. John Rogge, the Dept. of Justice's special prosecutor, will practice law in N. Y. He's the new partner in the firm of Rogge, Fabricant, Gordon & Goldman.

The current mystery in the music industry is why Rodgers & Hammerstein gave their "Allegro" album to Victor, without first offering it to Decca, the company which sold more than a million of their "Oklahoma!" albums . . .

When G. B. Shaw met J. B. Priestly for the first time, he said: "Mr. Priestly, I must confess I haven't read your book." Priestly replied: "Mr. Shaw, I must confess I haven't read yours either."

Oh that Golden Slipper for glamorous street-wear!

Here's a pro-glamour fashion note from Hollywood! Designed for daytime or dates, sports clothes or street things! So flat . . . so daring . . . and so a-glitter that you'll love it for cocktail-hours and dancing. Leather sole . . . gold kid straps.
